Allies Seek To Prevent Dutch Blood Bath

POST-INVASION PLAN PROVIDES FOR PROTECTION

Some Groups Prepared For "Hatchet Day" When Huns Are Put On Run

NEW GOVERNMENT READY

Land To Be Temporarily Ruled Under State Of Military Siege

WASHINGTON, May 16 — An immediate post-invasion policy for Holland, intended to prevent a "blood bath" of German officials and Dutch Quislings, in which innocent people also might suffer, was outlined today by the Netherlands embassy.

This policy is expressed in an agreement already drawn up in London between the Dutch, British and American governments, to be signed within a few days. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will sign for the United States.

It designates a new agency known as the "Militaire Gezag," or military government, which will go into Holland with the invasion forces, and will rule the country under a special state of military siege.

Trouble Feared

Dutch officials explained that the first moment of invasion and liberation is the most dangerous moment for the orderly conduct of affairs. They said:

"The populace can at last give play to their pent up feelings, and blood baths could quite easily result, if there were no authorized government. Undoubtedly, many innocent people would become victims in such a contingency."

Reports leaking from Holland reveal that certain elements are planning a "hatchet day" at the moment the German yoke is lifted. This has a historic parallel in the orgies of the Dutch people when Napoleon retreated from Holland in 1815, and when the ships' carpenters in Amsterdam staged a bloody attack against the French who remained behind.

It is to avoid such an orgy of retribution that the Netherlands government plans to send in the Militaire Gezag.

It was emphasized, however, that the strong hand of the military will not remain in control beyond the period of emergency. With the return of Queen Wilhelmina to Holland, the present cabinet will automatically submit their resignations, so a new cabinet may be formed representing the underground elements, as well as the elements which have remained in exile.

Later, general elections will be held, for the formation of a permanent government, but this cannot occur, officials said, for at least a year, or possibly 18 months after the liberation.

It was pointed out that half a million Dutch people have been transported to Germany, in work batallions, and no accurate election lists can be prepared until these people are repatriated.

French Refugees Think Hitler Will Burn Paris For Brutal Revenge

SUPREME ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, England, May 16—If the opinion of recently escaped French refugees holds good, Allied troops will find Paris smoking in its own ruins as the token of Hitler's brutal revenge against anti-Nazi Europe.

All symptoms from the continent tend to confirm the suspicion that the once glittering city on the banks of the Seine has been picked as a funeral pyre around which the Nazi madmen, before fleeing toward their own borders under the pressure of the second front, will wave their fists and sing songs of hatred in toasting what they regard as retaliation for Berlin and other blitzed German cities.

Naples gave a fairly good sample of the thoroughness with which Nazi firebrands are able to bring misery and wanton destruction on a modern city. But in Naples, the Nazis also pulled punches because they had to take in consideration the fact that millions of Italians still remained their "technical" Axis ally and therefore could not be ruthlessly outraged and goaded into open antagonism. That same factor carries weight in any destruction undertaken in Rome, in addition to which religious considerations raise a heavy barrier to the razing of any part of the city.

No Paris Restraints

In Paris, however, Hitler without doubt feels he has a free hand to apply fire and sword and thus rob Europe of its favorite playground. For years to come this, in the German mind, would also eliminate France's most valuable commercial asset and perhaps turn the postwar tide of money-bulging tourists into more widespread channels.

The Nazi intention to wreck Paris beyond recognition has already become openly visible, as the escaped refugees from the Seine confirm. Whole sections of the city, including the beautiful Champs Elysee and Place De La Concorde areas, have been fortified to give battle to the Allied troops in the heart of the city. Ugly pill-boxes mar the imposing avenues and fountain islands, and even the best hotels such as the Crillon hide machinegun posts behind reinforced windows.

According to recent eyewitnesses, a complicated system of blockhouses and anti-tank defenses has now been completed around the chamber of deputies, the Place De La Concorde, the Ecole Militaire, the Champs De Mars and the Place De La Republique. At least thirty strongpoints in the heart of the city give a sweeping fire-field to the Germans and will enable them to defend every crossing point on either side of the Paris bridges or approaches to the inner sections. Trenches and fortifed basements are everywhere under construction.

Plan for Battle

This means, to the eye of the average Frenchman, that Hitler has every intention of making the Allies shoot into the city. In 1940 Hitler made much of the fact that Paris was spared by the wehrmacht after the French declared it an open city. But what was not generally known at the time was that German guns by the score stood ready to fire ruthlessly into the city, and Luftwaffe Stukas would not have been far behind. The fact that Paris could be taken without any protracted fighting to impede the blitzkrieg was all that mattered.

But the Nazis know as well as

DECISION LOOMS IN SKF INQUIRY

U. S. Seeks Means To Halt Flow Of War-Vital Product To Huns

WASHINGTON, May 16 — An early decision in the federal investigation of American subsidiaries of the huge Swedish SKF ballbearing company was expected today as the United States sought to stop the flow of the war-vital product from SKF in Sweden to Germany.

This was announced by James E. Markham, alien property custodian, after William L. Batt, vice-chairman of the War Production Board and president of SKF Industries, Inc., Philadelphia, disclosed he will address all workers of the firm's Philadelphia plants today.

"SKF is being investigated by the foreign funds division of the Treasury department and the alien property custodian," Markham said. "The investigation is not completed and no decision has been reached at this moment on any definite action."

Markham made it plain that "no inferences are to be drawn" that the investigation reflects on the patriotism of the employes or man-

NAZIS FEAR INVASION AT NETTUNO BEACHHEAD

LONDON, May 16—The Nazi-operated Paris radio reported today that there is great activity on the Nettuno beachhead immediately south of Rome and that an Allied offensive there, in conjunction with the all-out assault along the main battle line, is believed imminent.

COUPLE GIVES UP CITIZENSHIP TO REMAIN HUNS

NEW YORK, May 16—William and Meta Siebert, Bronx couple who were deprived of their U. S. citizenship at their own request because they "will always be loyal to Germany and hate Democracy" were interned today on Ellis island as enemy aliens.

They were quite satisfied with this turn of events—and so were their Bronx neighbors, who had expressed their feelings toward the couple by painting a swastika and "heil Hitler" on the sidewalk in front of the former Siebert residence.

German-born William Siebert and his wife, a native of Michigan City, Ind., who was reared in Germany, probably will be deported after the war.

Yanks, Able To Pick And Choose, Giving Nipponese Case Of Jitters

PEARL HARBOR, May 16—Repeated statements by high ranking military authorities concerning the stupendous growth in U. S. carrier strength apparently has seeped into the minds of the Japanese war lords who see in these facts the hurdling of their "east wall" of islands and the coming bombing of their mainland cities.

Tokyo, knowing full well the striking power of a fleet which can criss-cross thousands of miles of an ocean once dominated by Japan, now is more or less in the same position as its remaining Axis power, Germany.

The Germans realize that Gen. Eisenhower, from his headquarters on the tight little island of Great Britain, can pull a series of feints anywhere from the North sea to the far reaches of the Mediterranean to "cover up" the main invasion thrust. The various Pacific commands — Nimitz, MacArthur, Mountbatten — are now in position to use the same idea of feints but with warships and carrier planes instead of highly-trained commandos and rangers.

Can Pick, Choose

Our forces, now based so that they can pick and choose their various targets, have given Japan something akin to Germany's "invasion jitters." The enemy knows that while his homeland is not yet in danger of immediate invasion, his outposts throughout the Pacific and in the waters of the Indian ocean are now exposed to any type of warfare—naval or amphibious—which we might choose to wage. Further, Tokyo's constant reminders to the homefront that bombing of their cities is but a matter of time is further affirmation of lack of faith in their "east wall" of islands.

Tokyo Voices Fear

The constant drumming on the theme of bombing of Japanese cities by American planes, beating out nearly every day from the enemy's broadcasts for home consumption, is an indication of fear that such raids will take place long before Admiral Nimitz has

CONVICT STAYS IN PRISON TO ESCAPE PRISON

CHICAGO, May 16—They're not going to kick Elijah Jackson, alias Frank Hale, out of Stateville prison down in Joliet, Ill., at least not till they take those officers from Ohio and Michigan off his trail.

Although Jackson, originally from Oklahoma City, completed his two year and 15 day sentence at the penitentiary for parole violation yesterday, he was back there today not only willingly but insistently.

Jackson appeared with his attorney before Federal Judge John P. Barnes in Chicago asking him, please, to issue a writ of habeas corpus which would remove permanently the threat of extradition to either of these two states where, it seems, he is wanted, also on charges of parole violation.

Meanwhile, officers from Michigan and Ohio were lurking about the federal building ready to pounce on Jackson with fugitive warrants the moment he was off government property and not under the protection of Prison Warden Joseph Ragen.

Judge Barnes set May 24 for a hearing on the writ petition and suggested that Jackson remain in prison until that date.

Gigantic New Sweeps Against Japs Forecast By Navy Oil Request

WASHINGTON, May 16 — Gigantic new offensive sweeps against Japan by the United States Pacific fleet and air forces were foreshadowed today by the Navy's sudden, surprise request for an additional output of thirty million barrels of oil before the end of this year.

This was disclosed in testimony before the house naval affairs committee by Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ralph A. Bard, who urged early congressional action to permit the Navy to boost production of oil from 15,000 to 65,000 barrels daily in the Elk Hills reserve in California. The increased production was also requested by Acting Secretary James V. Forrestal.

Bard merely hinted at coming events in the Pacific when he said "there has been a sudden change in circumstances," and the joint chiefs of staff on May 3 asked for an immediate increase in oil production for the Pacific war theatre.

The fact that the request from the high command came less than two weeks ago indicated important decisions have been made for new blows against Japan and that the coming months might see action on a scale unknown to date in the Pacific or anywhere else.

The decision may have been prompted by the startling successes scored by America's powerful Pacific fleet in recent assaults against key Jap bases at Truk, Saipan and Palau, on the road to the Philippines and China. In all cases, the enemy fleet fled in the face of overwhelming U. S. sea-air striking power.

Importance of coming actions was indicated by the fact that the Navy had hoped to conserve its Elk Hills reserve. As Bard put it, the Navy had expected to get along "with only nominal withdrawal throughout this war."

"But we have been forced to the reluctant conclusion that a large increase is now imperative . . ." Bard added.

Regardless of the progress of the Pacific conflict, high-ranking Army and Navy officials have been conferring recently on plans to stab deeper and deeper into Japan's key holdings in the Pacific.

The first indication was the recent announcement of a conference between Gen. Douglas MacArthur, supreme Allied commander in the Southwest Pacific, and Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific fleet.

Also there was a conference recently on the Pacific coast with Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the U. S. fleet, Nimitz, and Admiral William F. Halsey, Jr., present.

KID AND BRIDE TRAVEL AGAIN, BUT WITH LAW

DENVER, May 16—The "honeymoon trip" of Ellsworth "Sonny" Wisecarver, 14, and his 21-year-old bride, Mrs. Elaine Monfredi Wisecarver, both of Los Angeles, was to be resumed today—but well chaperoned by Deputy Sheriff W. O. Reynolds and Mrs. Reynolds.

The boy-husband and his wife, who claims to have entered into two previous common law marriages, are being taken from Denver to Los Angeles where Elaine will face a charge of child stealing and "Sonny" will be turned over to his mother at Compton, Cal.

Elaine told Deputy Sheriff Reynolds she and "Sonny" were anxious to get back to California "to get this case settled and resume our married life" where it left off with their arrest in Denver nearly two weeks ago after their elopement from Los Angeles to Yuma, Ariz.

DOROTHY FLEET ASKS DIVORCE AND $10,000,000

LOS ANGELES, May 16—Mrs. Dorothy M. Fleet, 36, sought a divorce today from Reuben H. Fleet, 56, financier and former president of Consolidated Aircraft Co.

She charged that her husband "inflicted great mental suffering and bodily injury" on her. She asked the court for all the community property, estimated to exceed $10,000,000, and also asked custody of their three children.

They were married in Erie, Pa., July 7, 1931, and separated November 28, 1940.

"Average Man" Insists On Draft For Fourth Term, Easterners Told

DOVER, Del., May 16—Sen. James M. Tunnell (D) Del., told the Delaware Democratic state convention today that the "average man in every community in the United States" wants President Roosevelt "drafted" for a fourth term.

"I don't think there is a section or a community of any size in which the sentiment of the people is other than that the President of the United States should be retained, should be drafted for a continuation and a successful conclusion of the present war, if the war has not been decided before the presidential election," Tunnell said.

Tunnell, a staunch administration supporter, described Mr. Roosevelt's twelve-year tenure as a "masterful" job and said it warranted his "forced induction" as the nation's leader.

"Now the greatest feat of our government during the period of this administration is the fact that it has accomplished the great improvement in America's conditions with no scandals, no starvation, no unemployment and no crooked elections," he asserted.

"If we have forced induction for the private, the non-commissioned officer and for the commissioned officer, why should there not be a forced induction for the commander-in-chief? Why not draft Franklin Delano Roosevelt?"

Since 1932, Tunnell continued, there have been "few outstanding opposition political leaders developed in America." He credited his contention to the assertion "that the best thought of American in both parties has agreed in the main with the administration."

ALLIES MUM ON NEW OUTBREAK BY DE GAULLE

ALGIERS, May 16—Allied observers were reticent today in expressing an opinion as to the intention of Gen. Charles De Gaulle in declaring that France is not bound by the Darlan-Clark agreements on which the United Nations' military authority in North Africa rests.

Some circles saw in Gen. De Gaulle's statement before the consultative assembly of the French Committee of National Liberation a demand for hastening of revision of the accords, which were signed by American Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark and the late Adm. Jean Francois Darlan. Scarcely any observers could be found who were ready to accept De Gaulle's statement at its face value, a complete repudiation of the agreements.

De Gaulle made his statement in reply to a request by a member for information regarding these accords.

"Allow me to say a word about the Darlan-Clark accords," De Gaulle declared. "I want to say publicly that France does not consider herself at all bound by agreements that might have been made in the past between the Allies' military authority on one side and Darlan on the other.

"Besides, much time has passed and many new facts . . . have affected the functioning of what for some reason are still called the 'Darlan-Clark accords'."

The assembly, which loudly acclaimed De Gaulle's declaration, gave further expression to its support for the chief of the French Committee of National Liberation by changing the name of that body to "Provisional Government of the French Republic." The general long has referred to the committee in this manner.

KANDY, Ceylon, May 16—The greatest battle yet waged on the India-Burma front came to an end today when Allied jungle troops drove the Japanese from the entire length of Kohima ridge, dominating the strategic ground before the big Indian supply base of the same name.

American and French troops of the Allied Fifth Army captured at least two more important Italian towns in their drive toward Rome today, and on their sector of the front Britons of the Eighth Army enlarged their bridgehead across the Rapido river.

Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Yanks and Poilus rolled relentlessly over the German defenses, capturing Spigno and San Giorgio and clearing the last remnant of organized Nazi resistance from the strategic Ausente valley. The Americans who seized Spigno, two and one half miles northwest of captured Santa Maria Infante, continued their drive toward Esperia, terminus of a good road which links with the Cassino-Rome highway.

Gen. Alphone Juin's French forces were credited with occupying San Giorgio, in a four-mile fighting advance from fallen Ausonia. Thus these troops stood a good eight miles beyond the point from which they advanced at the outset of the all-out offensive by Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson's command.

'YOUNG CHARLEY' EBBETS FOUND DEAD IN HOME

NEW YORK, May 16—The 19-year fight of Charles H. Ebbets, Jr., to collect a share of the million-dollar estate left by his father, founder of the Brooklyn baseball club, was ended today by death.

"Young Charley," as he was known, was found dead, penniless and alone in his two-and-a-half-room uptown apartment, by Charlotte Sherwood, who attended him since he collapsed a week ago from a malignant stomach ailment.

When his father died in 1925 he willed his estate to 15 heirs, including "Young Charley," his mother and two daughters, but the estate has been tied up in litigation ever since.

Meanwhile, officers from Michigan and Ohio were lurking about the federal building ready to pounce on Jackson with fugitive warrants the moment he was off government property and not under the protection of Prison Warden Joseph Ragen.

Judge Barnes set May 24 for a hearing on the writ petition and suggested that Jackson remain in prison until that date.

Gigantic New Sweeps Against Japs Forecast By Navy Oil Request

WASHINGTON, May 16 — Gigantic new offensive sweeps against Japan by the United States Pacific fleet and air forces were foreshadowed today by the Navy's sudden, surprise request for an additional output of thirty million barrels of oil before the end of this year.

This was disclosed in testimony before the house naval affairs committee by Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ralph A. Bard, who urged early congressional action to permit the Navy to boost production of oil from 15,000 to 65,000 barrels daily in the Elk Hills reserve in California. The increased production was also requested by Acting Secretary James V. Forrestal.

Bard merely hinted at coming events in the Pacific when he said "there has been a sudden change in circumstances," and the joint chiefs of staff on May 3 asked for an immediate increase in oil production for the Pacific war theatre.

The fact that the request from the high command came less than two weeks ago indicated important decisions have been made for new blows against Japan and that the coming months might see action on a scale unknown to date in the Pacific or anywhere else.

The decision may have been prompted by the startling successes scored by America's powerful Pacific fleet in recent assaults against key Jap bases at Truk, Saipan and Palau, on the road to the Philippines and China. In all cases, the enemy fleet fled in the face of overwhelming U. S. sea-air striking power.

Importance of coming actions was indicated by the fact that the Navy had hoped to conserve its Elk Hills reserve. As Bard put it, the Navy had expected to get along "with only nominal withdrawal throughout this war."

"But we have been forced to the reluctant conclusion that a large increase is now imperative . . ." Bard added.

Regardless of the progress of the Pacific conflict, high-ranking Army and Navy officials have been conferring recently on plans to stab deeper and deeper into Japan's key holdings in the Pacific.

The first indication was the recent announcement of a conference between Gen. Douglas MacArthur, supreme Allied commander in the Southwest Pacific, and Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific fleet.

Also there was a conference recently on the Pacific coast with Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the U. S. fleet, Nimitz, and Admiral William F. Halsey, Jr., present.

KID AND BRIDE TRAVEL AGAIN, BUT WITH LAW

DENVER, May 16—The "honeymoon trip" of Ellsworth "Sonny" Wisecarver, 14, and his 21-year-old bride, Mrs. Elaine Monfredi Wisecarver, both of Los Angeles, was to be resumed today—but well chaperoned by Deputy Sheriff W. O. Reynolds and Mrs. Reynolds.

The boy-husband and his wife, who claims to have entered into two previous common law marriages, are being taken from Denver to Los Angeles where Elaine will face a charge of child stealing and "Sonny" will be turned over to his mother at Compton, Cal.

Elaine told Deputy Sheriff Reynolds she and "Sonny" were anxious to get back to California "to get this case settled and resume our married life" where it left off with their arrest in Denver nearly two weeks ago after their elopement from Los Angeles to Yuma, Ariz.

DOROTHY FLEET ASKS DIVORCE AND $10,000,000

LOS ANGELES, May 16—Mrs. Dorothy M. Fleet, 36, sought a divorce today from Reuben H. Fleet, 56, financier and former president of Consolidated Aircraft Co.

She charged that her husband "inflicted great mental suffering and bodily injury" on her. She asked the court for all the community property, estimated to exceed $10,000,000, and also asked custody of their three children.

They were married in Erie, Pa., July 7, 1931, and separated November 28, 1940.

All of U. S. Wants FDR, Solon Says

"Average Man" Insists On Draft For Fourth Term, Easterners Told

DOVER, Del., May 16—Sen. James M. Tunnell (D) Del., told the Delaware Democratic state convention today that the "average man in every community in the United States" wants President Roosevelt "drafted" for a fourth term.

"I don't think there is a section or a community of any size in which the sentiment of the people is other than that the President of the United States should be retained, should be drafted for a continuation and a successful conclusion of the present war, if the war has not been decided before the presidential election," Tunnell said.

Tunnell, a staunch administration supporter, described Mr. Roosevelt's twelve-year tenure as a "masterful" job and said it warranted his "forced induction" as the nation's leader.

"Now the greatest feat of our government during the period of this administration is the fact that it has accomplished the great improvement in America's conditions with no scandals, no starvation, no unemployment and no crooked elections," he asserted.

"If we have forced induction for the private, the non-commissioned officer and for the commissioned officer, why should there not be a forced induction for the commander-in-chief? Why not draft Franklin Delano Roosevelt?"

Since 1932, Tunnell continued, there have been "few outstanding opposition political leaders developed in America." He credited his contention to the assertion "that the best thought of American in both parties has agreed in the main with the administration."

ALLIES MUM ON NEW OUTBREAK BY DE GAULLE

ALGIERS, May 16—Allied observers were reticent today in expressing an opinion as to the intention of Gen. Charles De Gaulle in declaring that France is not bound by the Darlan-Clark agreements on which the United Nations' military authority in North Africa rests.

Some circles saw in Gen. De Gaulle's statement before the consultative assembly of the French Committee of National Liberation a demand for hastening of revision of the accords, which were signed by American Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark and the late Adm. Jean Francois Darlan. Scarcely any observers could be found who were ready to accept De Gaulle's statement at its face value, a complete repudiation of the agreements.

De Gaulle made his statement in reply to a request by a member for information regarding these accords.

"Allow me to say a word about the Darlan-Clark accords," De Gaulle declared. "I want to say publicly that France does not consider herself at all bound by agreements that might have been made in the past between the Allies' military authority on one side and Darlan on the other.

"Besides, much time has passed and many new facts . . . have affected the functioning of what for some reason are still called the 'Darlan-Clark accords'."

The assembly, which loudly acclaimed De Gaulle's declaration, gave further expression to its support for the chief of the French Committee of National Liberation by changing the name of that body to "Provisional Government of the French Republic." The general long has referred to the committee in this manner.

KANDY, Ceylon, May 16—The greatest battle yet waged on the India-Burma front came to an end today when Allied jungle troops drove the Japanese from the entire length of Kohima ridge, dominating the strategic ground before the big Indian supply base of the same name.

The victory was scored at almost the same moment as tank-supported columns nearby effected a junction with another Allied force, inflicting heavy casualties on the retreating Nipponese.

By International News Service

American and French troops of the Allied Fifth Army captured at least two more important Italian towns in their drive toward Rome today, and on their sector of the front Britons of the Eighth Army enlarged their bridgehead across the Rapido river.

Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Yanks and Poilus rolled relentlessly over the German defenses, capturing Spigno and San Giorgio and clearing the last remnant of organized Nazi resistance from the strategic Ausente valley. The Americans who seized Spigno, two and one half miles northwest of captured Santa Maria Infante, continued their drive toward Esperia, terminus of a good road which links with the Cassino-Rome highway.

Gen. Alphone Juin's French forces were credited with occupying San Giorgio, in a four-mile fighting advance from fallen Ausonia. Thus these troops stood a good eight miles beyond the point from which they advanced at the outset of the all-out offensive by Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson's command.

'YOUNG CHARLEY' EBBETS FOUND DEAD IN HOME

NEW YORK, May 16—The 19-year fight of Charles H. Ebbets, Jr., to collect a share of the million-dollar estate left by his father, founder of the Brooklyn baseball club, was ended today by death.

"Young Charley," as he was known, was found dead, penniless and alone in his two-and-a-half-room uptown apartment, by Charlotte Sherwood, who attended him since he collapsed a week ago from a malignant stomach ailment.

When his father died in 1925 he willed his estate to 15 heirs, including "Young Charley," his mother and two daughters, but the estate has been tied up in litigation ever since.

cut his way across the Pacific to the China coast.

It is possible that the Japanese people have not been told, or shown pictures, of the destruction heaped on Germany's big cities—Hamburg, Berlin, Essen, Cologne—but the enemy over-lords do know of these devastating blows. They can readily understand how their "wooden cities"—Tokyo, Kobe, Yokohama, Nagasaki—can not stand up under a torrent of bombs which necessarily will not have to equal in tonnage the loads cascaded onto their Ally's war centers.

Tokyo has admitted that air raid drills are being held in the big Japanese cities; that air raid shelters are being hastily constructed that first aid and civilian defense courses are now the order of the day, while these are "home problems" for Tojo to handle, his military headaches probably are more concerned with trying to figure out where the next Allied blows will land.

In the far Northern Pacific, constant aerial strikes against the Kuriles have brought American planes to within a thousand miles of Tokyo itself and 560 miles from the Japanese mainland. Fleet units have bombarded Paramushiru.

In the Central Pacific, our base at Eniwetok in the Marshalls has brought us to just under 2,000 miles from Tokyo.

In the South Pacific, Gen. MacArthur is only 600 miles from the Philippines while British fleet units and American warships in their raid against Sabang penetrated to wthin 700 miles of Singapore.

Tokyo in the future must try to decide whether the next American operations in the Pacific are the "real thing" or whether feints are being pulled. One thing the enemy can see for himself is that all blows can be in force and for the Americans there is no doubt as to the outcome.

Attu Japs Kill Own Wounded!

Captured Diary of Nip Army Medico Reveals Murder of Comrades-in-Arms

By Central Press

WYANDOTTE, Mich.—The Japanese radio propaganda built up Attu's defenders as "heroes."

The diary of Doctor X, a Jap medical officer educated in this country, proves otherwise.

The diary, forwarded by its finder, Corp. John S. Raubolt, a Field Artillery radio-telephone operator in the Alaskan theater, to his mother, Mrs. John Raubolt, Wyandotte, Mich., cleared by Army censorship after some delay, gives a picture of Attu's Jap defenders quite at variance with that of Radio Tokyo.

Written in English, it tells of Jap officers who forced their wounded to commit suicide, who gave morphine to the more seriously wounded and then put them to death.

Dr. X—his actual name is withheld—attended the medical department of Pacific Union college, Agwin, Cal., from September, 1929, to May, 1932. He was given a medical license in California, May 8, 1939.

The diary opens May 12, 1943, with the American invasion of Attu in the Aleutians, saying: "Carrier-based plane flew over, fired at it. There is a low fog and the summit is clear. Evacuated to summit.

"Heard land noises. It is a naval gun firing. Prepared battle equipment. Information—American transports, about 41, begin landing at Hokkai Misski. Twenty boats landed at Massacre bay. It seems that they are going to unload heavy equipment. Day's activities — air raid, naval gun firing, and landing of American troops."

On May 13, Doctor X reports additional American troops landed at Massacre bay. Fifteen patients came to his field hospital, attached to the Arai Engineers unit. The entries now begin to show swift disintegration of Jap morale:

"May 14 — Our two submarines from Kiska assisting us have greatly damaged two enemy ships. The enemy has advanced to the bottom of Missumi Yama. Lieutenant Suyuki died from shots from rifle.

"Continuous flow of wounded in field hospital. Took refuge in trenches during the day and took care of patients during bombardment. Enemy strength must be a division, our desperate defense is holding up well.

"May 15 — Continuous flow of casualties to our field hospital caused by fierce bombardment of enemy land and naval forces. Just laid down from fatigue in the barracks. Facial expression of soldiers back from west arm is tense. They all went back to the firing line soon.

"May 16—If Shitigeti Dai is occupied by the enemy, the fate of east arm is decided. So burnt documents and prepared to destroy patients. At the moment there was an order from headquarters of sector unit. 'Proceed to Chicagof Harbor by way of Unanase, 0100 in the morning.' There was an air raid so took refuge in the former field hospital cave. The guns of a Lockheed spitted fire and flew past our cave."

A RAT HUNT—Three Yanks hunt for Japs entrenched in this gun emplacement on the west arm of Holtz Bay, referred to in the diary of "Doctor X." Rifles and hand grenades finally liquidated defenders.

The next day "Doctor X" fled under cover of darkness to the harbor, a nine-hour journey. On May 18, after recording more Jap withdrawals, he tells of conditions at the new base:

"About 60 wounded came to the field hospital. I had to care for all of them myself. Heard that the enemy carried out a landing on Chicagof Harbor. Everybody did combat preparations and waited. Had two grenades ready."

C. O. Gives Up

On May 21 comes the report of the Japs' commanding officer: "Nervousness of our C. O. is severe, and he has said his last word to his officers and NCO's—that he will die tomorrow. Gave all his articles away. Hasty chap, this fellow. The officers on the front are doing a fine job. Everyone who heard this became desperate and things became disorderly."

No further word is written regarding the fate of the Jap commander; but diary entries now become brief, with the emphasis on "Doctor X's" plight:

"May 23 — From 0200 in the morning until 1600 stayed in fox holes. The day's ration is 1.5 pounds, nothing more. Everybody looked around for food and stole everything they could find.

"May 24—It sleeted and was extremely cold. A great amount of shells were dropped by naval gun firing—rocks and mud fell all over the roof. It fell down in a fox hole about 50 yards away. Hayaska, a medical man, died instantly by a piece of shrapnel through the heart.

"May 25—Navy gun firing, aerial bombardment, trench warfare, the worst is yet to come. The enemy is constructing a new position. Battalion commander died at Unamose. They cannot accommodate patients. Am suffering from diarrhea and feel dizzy.

"May 26—By naval gun firing it felt like the Missumi barracks blew up and things lit up tremendously. Consciousness became vague. Strafing planes hit next room, two hits from a .50-caliber shell, one stopped in the ceiling and the other penetrated. My room is an awful mess from sand and pebbles through the roof.

The end was now in sight. On May 27 he noted that less than 1,000 Japs were left. "Took everything from pills, opium, morphine, then slept pretty well."

Not too coherent is the May 28 entry: "Remaining rations are only for two days. Our artillery has been completely destroyed. The company at the bottom of Attu Fuji has been annihilated except one.

"Continuous cases of suicide. Half of the sector unit headquarters blown away.

"Heard that they gave 400 shots of morphine to the seriously wounded and killed them. Ate fried thistle. It is the first time I have eaten something fresh in six months. It is a delicacy."

Then the final despairing entry, May 28:

"Today at 2000 o'clock we assembled in front of headquarters, the field hospital took part, too. The last assault is to be carried out. All the patients in the hospital were made to commit suicide. Only 33 years of living and I am to die here!"

agement of the SKF industry in Philadelphia.

"We hope for a decision soon," he said.

Batt told reporters his trip to Philadelphia would be a morale boosting expedition to assure 8,000 SKF workers in that city that none of their efforts in any way are aiding enemies of the United Nations. He expressed concern over the effect the present situation involving SKF might have on employes in this country.

Stanton Griffis, special representative of the foreign economic administration in Sweden, has been given authority to buy the entire output of Swedish SKF to keep the ballbearings out of Nazi hands.

Three courses open to the United States in the event action against SKF is decided on were described as follows:

1. Seizure of the American subsidiaries which, in addition to the Philadelphia plants, include SKF Steels, of New York City.
2. Blacklisting of the Swedish firm, which would involve possible present and postwar sanctions.
3. Stoppage of the movement of funds from the American branch to the parent company in Sweden.

COOK STOVE SHORTAGE REPORTED AS CRITICAL

Shortage of cooking stoves is critical and a woman may not escape Summer heat in the kitchen by shifting from coal to oil burning stoves as a convenience unless she already has the stoves. This announcement was made Tuesday at the office of the local ration board.

Mosquitoes, he said, perhaps with too much optimism, are on the point of extermination. The state flower—instead of an insect gun—will be the violet (not the shrinking variety).

the Cassino sector. The Britons now hold a segment of land approximately two miles deep on the German side of the stream.

The German DNB agency announced today that the Nazis had withdrawn from several additional heights south of Cassino, before the threat of encirclement by the famed British Eighth. According to the enemy transmission, the high ground was abandoned "after heavy and fluctuating battles."

The Nazi acknowledgement of further setback came shortly after Gen. Wilson's headquarters disclosed that the British Eighth Army had driven the Germans from several strongpoints in the fighting in the Liri valley.

Battleships Aid

At the westernmost end of the trans-peninsular battleline, American troops of the Fifth Army were supported by United States naval vessels. A cruiser of the U. S. Navy, escorted by two destroyers, bombarded German positions and batteries around Formia, seven miles southwest of Spigno, and Itri, nine miles from Spigno.

A British cruiser followed up the American naval bombardment, loosing 800 rounds of ammunition against the enemy in the coastal area. The Allied ships suffered neither damage nor casualties, although the Nazis offered some retaliatory fire from shore.

During the land operations, the Alied Fifth and Eighth armies increased to 3,000 their bag of Nazis taken prisoner since opening of the new offensive.

While the Germans suffered reverses in the Italian ground fighting, the Reich itself reeled under renewed air assaults by British-based bombers. The air ministry revealed that speedy Mosquito bombers carried out a night raid on Ludwigshafen, important industrial and chemical city of the Rhineland, as well as on other important targets within Germany and occupied France.

Only four of the night-flying plywood craft were reported missing from the assaults which included a raid on a Nazi airdrome in occupied France, and the placing of mines in enemy-controlled waters.

Huns Shot Down

Five Nazi planes were destroyed, on the other hand, by British home defense forces when the German air force intensified its reconnaissance activities designed to ferret out information regarding Anglo-American invasion preparations.

The Russian air force continued its campaign to knock out communication centers behind the northern sectors of the Russo-German front, adding five more rail targets to their list of devastated areas. Four of the objectives were in old Poland, and the other in Latvia; the long-range Soviet bombers set ablaze enemy military trains and railway facilities.

In the India-Burma theatre, heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy, as two tank-supported Allied columns joined north of Kohima.

Mr. Anderson, who was driving his car, was accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Helen Thompson, and her 7-month-old baby and Russell Keller, of Williamsport. Dickey was alone. No one was injured, but both cars were severely damaged.

anyone that a wholesale destruction of Paris could hardly be provoked through street fighting mixed with artillery and air bombardment. The escaping French claim that the Germans already are mining many of the major buildings and places of interest, in the hope of blowing them up after Allied troops have come and thus effecting casualties and confusion. The whispering galleries in Paris have it that when the Seine bridges begin to explode one by one, every Frenchman hiding in Paris can feel fairly certain that Allied troops are within marching distance and that "the dirty boche" is leaving.

To complete the ravaging of Paris, as the refugees see it, special squads of Nazi troops will be on hand to set the torch and fan the flame from one end of Paris to the other. Every worthwhile bit of treasure, art and valuable removable property will be carted away by Hitler's retreating minions.

Foresee Sabotage

The escaped refugees say that Hitler, foreseeing possible railway tieups through outraged Frenchmen when the rape of Paris begins, has recently poured into the vicinity some 22,000 German railwaymen, each one of them armed with a huge revolver. Thousands of armed S.S. have also arrived to quell any uprisings when the second front begins.

From the incoming reports, Allied troops must expect to find a hungry Paris once they arrive within its gates. The working classes already are going hungry, and food stocks within the city are known to be sufficient for less than a week once the tide of approaching battle halts incoming supplies. It is estimated that almost eighty percent of Paris at the moment is badly underfed, with another ten percent eating only slightly better.

The black market feeds the ten percent of war profiteers and collaborators who can afford to dine and wine at about 200 restaurants in the city able to serve forbidden foods at prices ranging to an average of 25 dollars per person.

Luxury places like Maxim's, where German officers and Nazi functionaries dine nightly with richly gowned women companions, can satisfy the appetite at about 50 a head. But the Frenchman who eats there is a marked Frenchman, in addition to being a war profiteer, and in the eyes of the average Parisian, his days are numbered. Thus, however one looks at it, the glittering Paris of a thousand songs is in for a bloodbath and a new spell of agony.

FARM BRINGS $10,267

The diary, forwarded by its finder, Corp. John S. Raubolt, a Field Artillery radio-telephone operator in the Alaskan theater, to his mother, Mrs. John Raubolt, Wyandotte, Mich., cleared by Army censorship after some delay, gives a picture of Attu's Jap defenders quite at variance with that of Radio Tokyo.

Written in English, it tells of Jap officers who forced their wounded to commit suicide, who gave morphine to the more seriously wounded and then put them to death.

Dr. X—his actual name is withheld—attended the medical department of Pacific Union college, Agwin, Cal., from September, 1929, to May, 1932. He was given a medical license in California, May 8, 1939.

The diary opens May 12, 1943, with the American invasion of Attu in the Aleutians, saying: "Carrier-based plane flew over, fired at it. There is a low fog and the summit is clear. Evacuated to summit.

"Heard land noises. It is a naval gun firing. Prepared battle equipment. Information—American transports, about 41, begin landing at Hokkai Misski. Twenty boats landed at Massacre bay. It seems that they are going to unload heavy equipment. Day's activities — air raid, naval gun firing, and landing of American troops."

On May 13, Doctor X reports additional American troops landed at Massacre bay. Fifteen patients came to his field hospital, attached to the Arai Engineers unit. The entries now begin to show swift disintegration of Jap morale:

"May 14 — Our two submarines from Kiska assisting us have greatly damaged two enemy ships. The enemy has advanced to the bottom of Missumi Yama. Lieutenant Suyuki died from shots from rifle.

"Continuous flow of wounded in field hospital. Took refuge in trenches during the day and took care of patients during bombardment. Enemy strength must be a division, our desperate defense is holding up well.

"May 15 — Continuous flow of casualties to our field hospital caused by fierce bombardment of enemy land and naval forces. Just laid down from fatigue in the barracks. Facial expression of soldiers back from west arm is tense. They all went back to the firing line soon.

"May 16—If Shitigeti Dai is occupied by the enemy, the fate of east arm is decided. So burnt documents and prepared to destroy patients. At the moment there was an order from headquarters of sector unit. 'Proceed to Chicagof Harbor by way of Unanase, 0100 in the morning.' There was an air raid so took refuge in the former field hospital cave. The guns of a Lockheed spitted fire and flew past our cave."

The next day "Doctor X" fled under cover of darkness to the harbor, a nine-hour journey. On May 18, after recording more Jap withdrawals, he tells of conditions at the new base:

"About 60 wounded came to the field hospital. I had to care for all of them myself. Heard that the enemy carried out a landing on Chicagof Harbor. Everybody did combat preparations and waited. Had two grenades ready."

C. O. Gives Up

On May 21 comes the report of the Japs' commanding officer: "Nervousness of our C. O. is severe, and he has said his last word to his officers and NCO's—that he will die tomorrow. Gave all his articles away. Hasty chap, this fellow. The officers on the front are doing a fine job. Everyone who heard this became desperate and things became disorderly."

No further word is written regarding the fate of the Jap commander; but diary entries now become brief, with the emphasis on "Doctor X's" plight:

"May 23 — From 0200 in the morning until 1600 stayed in fox holes. The day's ration is 1.5 pounds, nothing more. Everybody looked around for food and stole everything they could find.

"May 24—It sleeted and was extremely cold. A great amount of shells were dropped by naval gun firing—rocks and mud fell all over the roof. It fell down in a fox hole about 50 yards away. Hayaska, a medical man, died instantly by a piece of shrapnel through the heart.

"May 25—Navy gun firing, aerial bombardment, trench warfare, the worst is yet to come. The enemy is constructing a new position. Battalion commander died at Unamose. They cannot accommodate patients. Am suffering from diarrhea and feel dizzy.

"May 26—By naval gun firing it felt like the Missumi barracks blew up and things lit up tremendously. Consciousness became vague. Strafing planes hit next room, two hits from a .50-caliber shell, one stopped in the ceiling and the other penetrated. My room is an awful mess from sand and pebbles through the roof.

The end was now in sight. On May 27 he noted that less than 1,000 Japs were left. "Took everything from pills, opium, morphine, then slept pretty well."

Not too coherent is the May 28 entry: "Remaining rations are only for two days. Our artillery has been completely destroyed. The company at the bottom of Attu Fuji has been annihilated except one.

"Continuous cases of suicide. Half of the sector unit headquarters blown away.

"Heard that they gave 400 shots of morphine to the seriously wounded and killed them. Ate fried thistle. It is the first time I have eaten something fresh in six months. It is a delicacy."

Then the final despairing entry, May 28:

"Today at 2000 o'clock we assembled in front of headquarters, the field hospital took part, too. The last assault is to be carried out. All the patients in the hospital were made to commit suicide. Only 33 years of living and I am to die here!"

AUSENTE VALLEY CLEAR OF HUNS; SPIGNO FALLS

British Bridgehead Across Rapido Widened By Fighting Eighth

the Cassino sector. The Britons now hold a segment of land approximately two miles deep on the German side of the stream.

The German DNB agency announced today that the Nazis had withdrawn from several additional heights south of Cassino, before the threat of encirclement by the famed British Eighth. According to the enemy transmission, the high ground was abandoned "after heavy and fluctuating battles."

The Nazi acknowledgement of further setback came shortly after Gen. Wilson's headquarters disclosed that the British Eighth Army had driven the Germans from several strongpoints in the fighting in the Liri valley.

Battleships Aid

At the westernmost end of the trans-peninsular battleline, American troops of the Fifth Army were supported by United States naval vessels. A cruiser of the U. S. Navy, escorted by two destroyers, bombarded German positions and batteries around Formia, seven miles southwest of Spigno, and Itri, nine miles from Spigno.

A British cruiser followed up the American naval bombardment, loosing 800 rounds of ammunition against the enemy in the coastal area. The Allied ships suffered neither damage nor casualties, although the Nazis offered some retaliatory fire from shore.

During the land operations, the Allied Fifth and Eighth armies increased to 3,000 their bag of Nazis taken prisoner since opening of the new offensive.

While the Germans suffered reverses in the Italian ground fighting, the Reich itself reeled under renewed air assaults by British-based bombers. The air ministry revealed that speedy Mosquito bombers carried out a night raid on Ludwigshafen, important industrial and chemical city of the Rhineland, as well as on other important targets within Germany and occupied France.

Only four of the night-flying plywood craft were reported missing from the assaults which included a raid on a Nazi airdrome in occupied France, and the placing of mines in enemy-controlled waters.

Huns Shot Down

Five Nazi planes were destroyed, on the other hand, by British home defense forces when the German air force intensified its reconnaissance activities designed to ferret out information regarding Anglo-American invasion preparations.

The Russian air force continued its campaign to knock out communication centers behind the northern sectors of the Russo-German front, adding five more rail targets to their list of devastated areas. Four of the objectives were in old Poland, and the other in Latvia; the long-range Soviet bombers set ablaze enemy military trains and railway facilities.

In the India-Burma theatre, heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy, as two tank-supported Allied columns joined north of Kohima.

CLARKSBURG MAN HELD AFTER AUTO COLLISION

Paul Dickey, 35, Clarksburg, was arrested Monday at 10:30 p. m. by the sheriff's department for failure to stop at a marked intersection.

Dickey drove off State Route 316 onto the Williamsport-Chillicothe pike near Bazore's mill and was in collision with the car of Luther Anderson, Williamsport implement dealer. Mr. Anderson, who was driving his car, was accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Helen Thompson, and her 7-month-old baby and Russell Keller, of Williamsport. Dickey was alone. No one was injured, but both cars were severely damaged.

The Pirate Bluebeard had great personal courage. It took five pistol wounds and 20 sword wounds for Lieutenant Maynard to down him in the historic fight off Ocracoke, N. C.

anyone that a wholesale destruction of Paris could hardly be provoked through street fighting mixed with artillery and air bombardment. The escaping French claim that the Germans already are mining many of the major buildings and places of interest, in the hope of blowing them up after Allied troops have come and thus effecting casualties and confusion. The whispering galleries in Paris have it that when the Seine bridges begin to explode one by one, every Frenchman hiding in Paris can feel fairly certain that Allied troops are within marching distance and that "the dirty boche" is leaving.

To complete the ravaging of Paris, as the refugees see it, special squads of Nazi troops will be on hand to set the torch and fan the flame from one end of Paris to the other. Every worthwhile bit of treasure, art and valuable removable property will be carted away by Hitler's retreating minions.

Foresee Sabotage

The escaped refugees say that Hitler, foreseeing possible railway tieups through outraged Frenchmen when the rape of Paris begins, has recently poured into the vicinity some 22,000 German railwaymen, each one of them armed with a huge revolver. Thousands of armed S.S. have also arrived to quell any uprisings when the second front begins.

From the incoming reports, Allied troops must expect to find a hungry Paris once they arrive within its gates. The working classes already are going hungry, and food stocks within the city are known to be sufficient for less than a week once the tide of approaching battle halts incoming supplies. It is estimated that almost eighty percent of Paris at the moment is badly underfed, with another ten percent eating only slightly better.

The black market feeds the ten percent of war profiteers and collaborators who can afford to dine and wine at about 200 restaurants in the city able to serve forbidden foods at prices ranging to an average of 25 dollars per person.

Luxury places like Maxim's, where German officers and Nazi functionaries dine nightly with richly gowned women companions, can satisfy the appetite at about 50 a head. But the Frenchman who eats there is a marked Frenchman, in addition to being a war profiteer, and in the eyes of the average Parisian, his days are numbered. Thus, however one looks at it, the glittering Paris of a thousand songs is in for a bloodbath and a new spell of agony.

agement of the SKF industry in Philadelphia.

"We hope for a decision soon," he said.

Batt told reporters his trip to Philadelphia would be a morale boosting expedition to assure 8,000 SKF workers in that city that none of their efforts in any way are aiding enemies of the United Nations. He expressed concern over the effect the present situation involving SKF might have on employes in this country.

Stanton Griffis, special representative of the foreign economic administration in Sweden, has been given authority to buy the entire output of Swedish SKF to keep the ballbearings out of Nazi hands.

Three courses open to the United States in the event action against SKF is decided on were described as follows:

1. Seizure of the American subsidiaries which, in addition to the Philadelphia plants, include SKF Steels, of New York City.

2. Blacklisting of the Swedish firm, which would involve possible present and postwar sanctions.

3. Stoppage of the movement of funds from the American branch to the parent company in Sweden.

COOK STOVE SHORTAGE REPORTED AS CRITICAL

Shortage of cooking stoves is critical and a woman may not escape Summer heat in the kitchen by shifting from coal to oil burning stoves as a convenience unless she already has the stoves. The OPA will not issue the certificates except in event of necessity and then only for year-around, rather than seasonal use. This announcement was made Tuesday at the office of the local ration board.

A ROSE BY ANY NAME

JERSEY CITY—Governor Walter E. Edge of New Jersey has proclaimed that the "Mosquito State" is no more; that henceforth New Jersey will be known as the "Garden State." Mosquitoes, he said, perhaps with too much optimism, are on the point of extermination. The state flower—instead of an insect gun—will be the violet (not the shrinking variety).

FRATERNAL NATIONS

MANY Americans pricked up their ears when Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada, addressing the British parliament, declared that it would be a prime object of Canada's post war policy "to work for the maintenance of a fraternal association of the British and American peoples." It wasn't a one-way speech. He emphasized the importance of close collaboration of the British Commonwealth (a loose union of the free British nations) with the other United Nations, not merely for the duration of this war but after it is won. When peace comes, he said, "it is our highest hope that the people of the British Commonwealth and the United States will continue to march at each other's side, united more closely than ever."

No doubt a large majority of the American people, regardless of their own racial origins, feel much the same now about this matter. But will this attitude continue strongly when the war is over? It is always to be remembered that there are far more varied and disintegrating elements in the make-up of the American people than there are in the British nucleus which governs the British empire.

We are pretty thoroughly united now. But when the war is over, the enemies who have fought us openly will still be doing their best to fight us covertly, and especially to create disunity between Britain and America. We shall have to guard against that.

SPARE PARTS

TO the "blood banks" which play so important a part in this war, and are used wherever there is serious loss of blood by accidents, there may now be added "eye banks." One is said to have been established already in a New York hospital. It isn't exactly a matter of keeping whole human eyes in storage for use as required, but preserving human corneas or front windows of the eyeballs. Corneas can be collected from living donors or removed immediately after death. Obviously this may be done to a large extent on battlefields or in military hospitals.

It is remarkable how much progress is being made along this and other lines which are able to supply injured human bodies with living material from other bodies. Physical "spare parts" may be rather familiar before this war is over.

If the women are going to take over this country permanently, men may as well start picking out easier jobs for themselves.

A plugged penny for Hitler's thoughts as he looks things over.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

CLOSENESS OF HOOVER TO DEWEY

WASHINGTON—There has been a lot of discussion inside Republican ranks about the closeness of Herbert Hoover to Tom Dewey. Some are dead against the Hoover influence, claim that the hand of Hooverism will blight both Dewey and GOP chances this year. Others are equally strong for Hoover, recalling that, even though defeated by Roosevelt, Hoover rolled up a substantial popular vote in 1932 and remains today one of the elder statesmen of the party.

But whether for or against Hoover, there is no real argument, among those who have watched the wheels go round, about the fact that Hoover has been the mainspring of the Dewey campaign.

Representative Clare Luce of Connecticut got a sample of this just before GOP leaders met recently in Chicago to organize for the Republican convention.

On the day before the organization meeting (at which Governor Warren of California was selected as the convention's keynote speaker) Mrs. Luce called Hoover on the phone. She told him that several people had suggested that she might be the keynote speaker, and she asked Hoover's advice as to whether she had a chance and what she should do about it.

"No use even bothering about it," Hoover replied. "Warren will be selected tomorrow."

He was.

Note—Another convention speaker selected at Chicago was Hoover himself, not without the blessing of Dewey. Hoover was put across largely through J. Russel Sprague, national committeeman from New York, who acted as Dewey's factotum at Chicago.

PROTECTION FOR PARATROOPERS

Thanks largely to hard-hitting Senator Kilgore of West Virginia, the War department is now doing its best to put self-sealing gasoline tanks in paratroop-carrying transport planes, also will supply the planes with a certain amount of armor to protect pilots.

After this column revealed that not one, but two groups of U. S. paratroopers over Sicily had been shot down by Allied gunners last July, Senator Kilgore wrote a letter to Secretary of War Stimson, pointing out that many of the paratroopers in the planes never had a chance to bail out, for some of the planes burst into flames while still in midair, due to the fact that the gasoline tanks ignited from anti-aircraft fire. Senator Kilgore pointed out that these paratroop transport planes did not have self-sealing gasoline tanks and asked Stimson to rectify this situation.

Kilgore has now received assurances that self-sealing tanks will be rushed into use on as many transport planes as possible.

There had been a dispute among air officers regarding the use of self-sealing tanks, some of the Brass Hats claiming that they could not be installed in time and that nothing must hold up the invasion. Other air officers argued, however, that U. S. airmen in England had been able to install self-sealing tanks in planes in English garages or any place else, that it was a simple matter and that the job at least should be started.

This latter group, according to assur-

Use of Thiamine To Relieve Itching

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WELL, HERE it is. Understand I take no responsibility for the statements hereunder following. I have not tried it out myself. All I know is what I read in responsible medical journals. But I have good authority; it is the Minnesota Medical Journal in the issue of September, 1943. And that makes it at least credible. Furthermore it will not do anybody any harm to try it. The remedy is not dangerous in any sense, and anyone can try it.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

It appears that Vitamin B will relieve itching of any kind including mosquito bites.

I had better begin with the story of the 2-year-old boy who had to be kept indoors in the summer because of the viciousness with which he was attacked by mosquitoes whenever he went out. When he was bitten the lumps lasted for days and gave him no rest. After receiving 40 milligrams of thiamine (which is part of Vitamin B complex) he slept all night in comfort. He was bitten by mosquitoes the next day, but the bites did not itch. By evening all welts, old and new, had disappeared.

Mosquitoes Avoided Child

In another case where a child had received large doses of thiamine the mosquitoes quit coming around him. When large doses are given a characteristic odor given off from the skin is noted and it is supposed this might cause the mosquitoes to avoid such a person. Although, as an old-time woodsman with a long experience with penny-royal and such like, I should say with the Irishman in Bill McBride's story—"It's very difficult to decave a mosquito."

The doctor who discovered this use for thiamine had his first experience with a 13-year-old girl who had chilblains. After taking 120 milligrams of thiamine hydrochloride within eight hours she had relief from the discomfort and itching.

It has been used with relief in hives, poison ivy, scabies (ordinary itch), itching ears, pityriasis rosea, measles and chicken pox. I see no reason why it should not be tried in such annoying conditions as pruritus vulvae, about which people are always writing me and about the relief of which I have never known anything to tell. Nobody seems to know what the cause of this affection is, and so most of the writers of textbooks on skin diseases call it a neurosis.

Nor do I see any reason why this new remedy should not be used in the generalized pruritus, or itching of old people. This must be due very largely to the senile atrophy of the skin; anyone can see from the thinning skin of old people that it is one of the first organs to show the great involution. We know that bathing and excessive use of soap makes elderly people itch. Furthermore because their digestive juices and digestive absorption are likely to be low, old people are naturally prone to be deficient in Vitamin B. At least here we have an experimental field of possibly good therapeutic results in a set of conditions where heretofore we have been nearly helpless.

I do not believe, however, that in these cases, especially the children with hives, that thiamine acts by supplying a vitamin deficiency. Several of the vitamins when given in large doses seem to act in a way entirely independently of their functions as food: in fact they act like drugs with a pharmacological action. This may be the explanation of the action of thiamine in itching.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M.: What do you think of curettements to help have a baby?

E. C.: Is there any chance of getting pregnant after having the womb curetted?

Answer: These two questions are put down together to show different views on the same subject. My opinion would be that curettement does not increase the chances of pregnancy and it certainly does not prevent it.

Will H-Hour of D-Day Come? Washington Scribe Wonders | A Different Allied Strategy Instead of All-Out Invasion?

By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist

● WASHINGTON—A new and startling thought is creeping through Washington. It is this—the Allied invasion of the continent will never take place. The dreaded D-Day will never come to pass.

At least a dozen people—most of them regular Army men—have expressed this astounding idea: "Perhaps it is only a hunch and the Army should never have hunches—but I can't chase this particular hunch away—I just don't think there will be an invasion."

Spring Thaw Comes and Goes, Yet—

The Allied strategy will be something different, these officers are saying. And what is the basis of this conclusion? Well, it isn't logical to talk about an invasion as much as the leaders have talked about this one if more than talk is actually intended.

For months there have been promises: "We shall invade when the spring thaw sets in."

The spring thaw does set in. There is no invasion. But more talk, such as this:

"We shall invade when spring is farther advanced."

Spring advances, comes galloping up and almost by. There is still no invasion.

Setting the season and almost the hour of the big push in the manner the Allied forces have been following is rather like saying to a burglar: "If you really want to rob my house, I shall be away next Tuesday night at 11 o'clock. Thought you'd like to know, so you could make your plans."

What the future holds for nations and individuals, naturally, no one knows. But, regardless of the plans that are being so obviously made for D-Day, there is indeed a belief in Washington that there will be no D-Day.

• • • •

● I LISTENED IN ON A DISCUSSION of the anxiety that must be tormenting Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin on the eve of the invasion. Some of the talkers grieved over the weight of responsibility the three leaders are carrying. What must be their thoughts as they tried to sleep, of the death and suffering their word "Go" would bring to millions of people?

One member of the discussion group had a contrary approach.

"It doesn't matter in the least how troubled Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin are. What really matters are the thoughts of the boys who will have to throw themselves at the enemy. They must be afraid, terribly afraid, as they stare into the prospect of death."

"You're wrong," came another opinion. "Each soldier thinks he will escape, just as you yourself think you will not be hit by an automobile. This is certainly the attitude of the green troops.

"The men who have been through several campaigns have worked their fate out on a law of averages. They say that in every engagement a certain proportion of men go down. When their number comes up it just comes. There is nothing to be done about it, they add philosophically. So what!"

• • • •

People Seem Indifferent To Politics

● THE COUNTRY REALLY ISN'T INTERESTED in the next presidential election, so returning travelers report. The people honestly do not care much who will be in the White House next. You almost never hear any political talk spun on trains in the good, old way.

What people really want to know is, "When do you think the war will end?" Politics is old stuff, pretty much the same old cast playing it, too. Other things more important to think about. This, I am told, is the opinion of the average person.

● HAD A SHORT SKETCH of Mrs. Douglas MacArthur from a colonel who knew her and the general in the Philippines. "There's a women who knows how to make other people feel successful," the colonel said. "She has a talent for putting you at ease. No, she's not pretty. But she's got fine eyes and a big smile. Mrs. MacArthur takes pains with all kinds of people. Whenever she went to a party in the lively pre-war days, she made the hostess think she wouldn't have got through the day if she had been left out. And can she handle a conversation? I've seen her keep four officers going with talk and back talk for half an hour at a stretch."

Sounds a proper wife for a general.

STARS SAY—

For Tuesday, May 16

ALTHOUGH THERE is omen of a sudden upsetting and disruptive force to contend with, according to the lunar transits, yet there are offsetting signs showing that with concentrated effort, diligence, patience and perseverance, all deep rooted dangers and disturbances may be sidestepped. This accomplished there may be surprising gains of radical importance, with much activity and pleasure in business as well as private life. Use the stimulated energies and substantial resources and background and all may be of enduring benefit.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of rather definite achievements, with solid returns for efforts well directed and resources and energies shrewdly utilized, in the face of a sudden disrupting or devastating combination of circumstances. Making changes, new plans or seeking fresh objectives should be done with sagacity. A concentrated marshalling of the forces, energies and resources should bring enduring and worthwhile results built upon solid foundations. In private affairs there may be surprising turns to romance or to happiness, but be discreet, and avoid all forms of extravagance, or eccentricities.

A child born on this day should have many solid traits of character and practical ability, with energy and creative power. It will be kindly and congenial.

NORTH TO DANGER by TOM GILL

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

Colin raised himself on his elbow. "What if those bombers take off tonight?"

"They'll hit some pretty heavy going. There's a patrol of pursuit planes strung across Canada—every last plane fit to fly is in the air. Meantime, Winnipeg, Ottawa, and Toronto are blacked out—we're calling it a practice maneuver."

Few slept that night. Long before daylight the gunners began putting the last loving touches to their weapons.

Dawn crept over the world as a red sun touched the southern ice to fire and, with that first beam, Dowling and his men followed Colin out over the frozen snowfield.

Less than two hours brought them to their goal. Well hidden in a sheltered elbow of the bay, the German air base looked quietly innocent beneath the morning sun. Two low, squat buildings, covered with ice to camouflage them from the air, and three huge white canvas hangars, staked down against the wind.

But no sign of life; no human activity. Scanning the terrain with a practiced eye, Col. Dowling called his lieutenants to him.

"Establish your machine guns where we agreed," he gave his crisp orders. "At the first sign of resistance we'll rake them with three fires. You have exactly thirty minutes to make ready."

Separating into groups, the gunners moved closer, keeping well back behind the shoreline, while Colin led Dowling and a squad of men to the shelter of a hummock. There they halted, and Colin heard the metallic click of machine guns loading; then Dowling whispered, "We can blow the very Hitler out of Fritz from here!" Watch in hand, Dowling waited. In thirty minutes, precisely to the second, Dowling turned to his nearest gunner.

"Fire a burst just this side of the building," he commanded.

Shots rattled, and puffs of shattered ice sprang up before the Germans' hut. It was like stamping on an anthill as a score of men in white parkas came piling out, some with rifles, but at sight of that waiting circle of men and guns, they drew quickly back and began huddling around a tall officer standing in the doorway.

The officer barked an order, and a German soldier bolted for the nearest hangar.

"He's going to blow up the bombers!" Colin shouted, but Dowling already had nodded to his gunner. A burst of shot, and the running Nazi sprawled on the ice just as the Canadian fighter planes came screaming in, barely clearing the hummocks, circling over the air base so low that the barrels of their machine guns glinted in the early light.

The Nazis gave up all show of resistance. Throwing down their guns, they crowded back toward the cabin, while their officer worked forward with raised hands. "Nicht mehr!" he called.

Leaving a strong guard over prisoners and planes, Colonel Dowling and Colin Rae were on their way back to Learmonth. "No one," the former grumbled, "who holds down my job should be surprised at anything. But this plot came so near succeeding I get a cold chill. They had bombs and drums of gas enough for twenty trips. They had flight maps for every airplane-producing center in the United States, and detailed routes to Detroit and New York. It could have been a major catastrophe of the war."

"How did they get those planes here?"

"They might have come in on submarines, but I doubt it. They could have flown them in without the least difficulty. Why, ten years ago, Germany made a test flight from Iceland to Chicago and Detroit in an old crate of a flying boat. Made it nonstop. Think how simple it would be now. It was partly because of that danger the United States landed troops in Iceland. Those bombers may have come from Norway, via Greenland perhaps."

Colin had been looking out the window. Suddenly, he asked, "Do you need me after we get to Learmonth?"

"Why?"

"Because I'm starting out after Jonathan Dove."

The Colonel frowned. "Be sensible, Rae. Men are on the watch for him now throughout Canada. Dove can't stick his nose out this country."

"Yes he can."

"How?"

"By meeting that plane he used for the photographic work. He can hide out until it's due, and then get away."

"Where will he meet it?"

"I know where," Colin answered shortly, "and I'm the only one that's going to know."

"All right." Dowling's shoulders rose in reluctant consent. "Have it your own way." He looked into Colin's eyes. "But when you get back, I've got a job for you."

"What kind of job?"

Dowling pointed toward the north. "How do we know the danger's over up there? Somewhere on the bay there may be other Nazi bomber nests. This thing today has taught me the need of a ground patrol, winter and summer, until the war's won. Air patrol alone isn't enough—they can camouflage their bases too well.

"I want you to organize a ground patrol for the country around the bay. Already Japan and Germany are building planes that can reach here if they find some safe place to base. You've got to see that they can't. You know this country, Rae; you know the people—Crees, Eskimos, and whites. You can build up your own organization and choose your own men." Dowling leaned forward, then very earnestly he said, "Let me count on you, Rae."

"When I come back," Colin answered, "you can count on me."

An hour later they landed. Leaving Dowling to radio Winnipeg, Colin hurried directly to Dove's school.

Tennant's wolf team lay in the trail outside Benedict's cabin, and it was Nate who opened the door at Colin's knock. Across the room Blair was standing, and she ran toward him, clasping his arm in both hands, as if to make certain he had come back to her. Nate asked, "What happened up above?"

Quickly Colin told them of the Nazi air base episode, then he asked the question that Blair dreaded. "Where is Dove?"

"All we know is this," Tennant answered. "Yesterday he came back to the school and left with his dog team over the Moose Lake trail. He took bedding and grub, two high-powered rifles and all the photo prints in that room. They've had planes up from Winnipeg scouring the country, but no word yet. Selkirk and the mounties started out this morning to spread the word to trappers and Indian villages."

Nate stopped, then casually he added, "I suppose you'll be going after him."

"Just as soon as I can pick up a dog team."

"I knew you'd say that. In fact"—Nate looked self-consciously toward Miss Benedict—"I promised Blair I'd go with you."

Colin shook his head. "This is a one-man job."

"No, it isn't." Nate's eyes were serious. "It's bad business following a man like Dove, and you know it. Let me come, Colin. We'll use my team. It's the fastest in the country. I've got food and eiderdowns packed for both—I've even got your favorite rifle, the 25 high-power. Let me come."

Colin's eyes rose to the big trapper's bandaged head. "I'm going a long way, Nate, and I'm going fast. You need rest."

Tennant's dark face hardened. "Dr. Benedict told me some things about Dove last night—the way he had Olsen plant snare wire and poisoned bait along my trap lines to set the Crees against me. I've got my own account to settle with Dove, so I'm coming along."

Without waiting for Colin's decision, Nate walked out to the wolf team.

Alone with Blair, Colin took her in his arms. "I've got to go, dear. You know that, don't you?"

"I know," she whispered. "All last night I knew it must be so. But just—just come back to me, that's all." They kissed.

Outside the cabin, Colin nodded to Tennant. The man hunt was on.

Raising the lead line of his toboggan, Nate shouted to the team. Crouching low in the snow, his wolves threw their great weight against the breastbands and, digging in their claws, they were off over the rough snow trail.

FRATERNAL NATIONS

MANY Americans pricked up their ears when Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada, addressing the British parliament, declared that it would be a prime object of Canada's post war policy "to work for the maintenance of a fraternal association of the British and American peoples." It wasn't a one-way speech. He emphasized the importance of close collaboration of the British Commonwealth (a loose union of the free British nations) with the other United Nations, not merely for the duration of this war but after it is won. When peace comes, he said, "it is our highest hope that the people of the British Commonwealth and the United States will continue to march at each other's side, united more closely than ever."

No doubt a large majority of the American people, regardless of their own racial origins, feel much the same now about this matter. But will this attitude continue strongly when the war is over? It is always to be remembered that there are far more varied and disintegrating elements in the make-up of the American people than there are in the British nucleus which governs the British empire.

We are pretty thoroughly united now. But when the war is over, the enemies who have fought us openly will still be doing their best to fight us covertly, and especially to create disunity between Britain and America. We shall have to guard against that.

SPARE PARTS

TO the "blood banks" which play so important a part in this war, and are used wherever there is serious loss of blood by accidents, there may now be added "eye banks." One is said to have been established already in a New York hospital. Corneas can be collected from living donors or removed immediately after death. Obviously this may be done to a large extent on battlefields or in military hospitals.

It is remarkable how much progress is being made along this and other lines which are able to supply injured human bodies with living material from other bodies. Physical "spare parts" may be rather familiar before this war is over.

If the women are going to take over this country permanently, men may as well start picking out easier jobs for themselves.

● I LISTENED IN ON A DISCUSSION of the anxiety that must be tormenting Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin on the eve of the invasion. Some of the talkers grieved over the weight of responsibility the three leaders are carrying. What must be their thoughts as they tried to sleep, of the death and suffering their word "Go" would bring to millions of people?

One member of the discussion group had a contrary approach.

"It doesn't matter in the least how troubled Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin are. What really matters are the thoughts of the boys who will have to throw themselves at the enemy. They must be afraid, terribly afraid, as they stare into the prospect of death."

"You're wrong," came another opinion. "Each soldier thinks he will escape, just as you yourself think you will not be hit by an automobile. This is certainly the attitude of the green troops.

"The men who have been through several campaigns have worked their fate out on a law of averages. They say that in every engagement a certain proportion of men go down. When their number comes up it just comes. There is nothing to be done about it, they add philosophically. So what!"

● THE COUNTRY REALLY ISN'T INTERESTED in the next presidential election, so returning travelers report. The people honestly do not care much who will be in the White House next. You almost never hear any political talk spun on trains in the good, old way.

People Seem Indifferent To Politics

What people really want to know is, "When do you think the war will end?" Politics is old stuff, pretty much the same old cast playing it, too. Other things more important to think about. This, I am told, is the opinion of the average person.

● HAD A SHORT SKETCH of Mrs. Douglas MacArthur from a colonel who knew her and the general in the Philippines. "There's a women who knows how to make other people feel successful," the colonel said. "She has a talent for putting you at ease. No, she's not pretty. But she's got fine eyes and a big smile. Mrs. MacArthur takes pains with all kinds of people. Whenever she went to a party in the lively pre-war days, she made the hostess think she wouldn't have got through the day if she had been left out. And can she handle a conversation? I've seen her keep four officers going with talk and back talk for half an hour at a stretch."

Sounds a proper wife for a general.

DIET AND HEALTH

Use of Thiamine To Relieve Itching

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WELL, HERE it is. Understand I take no responsibility for the statements hereunder following. I have not tried it out myself. All I know is what I read in responsible medical journals. But I have good authority; it is the Minnesota Medical Journal in the issue of September, 1943. And that makes it at least credible. Furthermore it will not do anybody any harm to try it. The remedy is not dangerous in any sense, and anyone can try it.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

It appears that Vitamin B will relieve itching of any kind including mosquito bites.

I had better begin with the story of the 2-year-old boy who had to be kept indoors in the summer because of the viciousness with which he was attacked by mosquitoes whenever he went out. When he was bitten the lumps lasted for days and gave him no rest. After receiving 40 milligrams of thiamine (which is part of Vitamin B complex) he slept all night in comfort. He was bitten by mosquitoes the next day, but the bites did not itch. By evening all welts, old and new, had disappeared.

Mosquitoes Avoided Child

In another case where a child had received large doses of thiamine the mosquitoes quit coming around him. When large doses are given a characteristic odor given off from the skin is noted and it is supposed this might cause the mosquitoes to avoid such a person. Although, as an old-time woodsman with a long experience with penny-royal and such like, I should say with the Irishman in Bill McBride's story—"It's very difficult to decave a mosquito."

The doctor who discovered this use for thiamine had his first experience with a 13-year-old girl who had chilblains. After taking 120 milligrams of thiamine hydrochloride within eight hours she had relief from the discomfort and itching.

It has been used with relief in hives, poison ivy, scabies (ordinary itch), itching ears, pityriasis rosea, measles and chicken pox. I see no reason why it should not be tried in such annoying conditions as pruritus vulvae, about which people are always writing me and about the relief of which I have never known anything to tell. Nobody seems to know what the cause of this affection is, and so most of the writers of textbooks on skin diseases call it a neurosis.

Nor do I see any reason why this new remedy should not be used in the generalized pruritus, or itching of old people. This must be due very largely to the senile atrophy of the skin; anyone can see from the thinning skin of old people that it is one of the first organs to show the great involution. We know that bathing and excessive use of soap makes elderly people itch. Furthermore because their digestive juices and digestive absorption are likely to be low, old people are naturally prone to be deficient in Vitamin B. At least here we have an experimental field of possibly good therapeutic results in a set of conditions where heretofore we have been nearly helpless.

I do not believe, however, that in these cases, especially the children with hives, that thiamine acts by supplying a vitamin deficiency. Several of the vitamins when given in large doses seem to act in a way entirely independently of their functions as food: in fact they act like drugs with a pharmacological action. This may be the explanation of the action of thiamine in itching.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M.: What do you think of curettements to help have a baby?

E. C.: Is there any chance of getting pregnant after having the womb curetted?

Answer: These two questions are put down together to show different views on the same subject. My opinion would be that curettement does not increase the chances of pregnancy and it certainly does not prevent it.

STARS SAY—

For Tuesday, May 16

ALTHOUGH THERE is omen of a sudden upsetting and disruptive force to contend with, according to the lunar transits, yet there are offsetting signs showing that with concentrated effort, diligence, patience and perseverance, all deep rooted dangers and disturbances may be sidestepped. This accomplished there may be surprising gains of radical importance, with much activity and pleasure in business as well as private life. Use the stimulated energies and substantial resources and background and all may be of enduring benefit.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of rather definite achievements, with solid returns for efforts well directed and resources and energies shrewdly utilized, in the face of a sudden disrupting or devastating combination of circumstances. Making changes, new plans or seeking fresh objectives should be done with sagacity. A concentrated marshalling of the forces, energies and resources should bring enduring and worthwhile results built upon solid foundations. In private affairs there may be surprising turns to romance or to happiness, but be discreet, and avoid all forms of extravagance, or eccentricities.

A child born on this day should have many solid traits of character and practical ability, with energy and creative power. It will be kindly and congenial.

NORTH TO DANGER by TOM GILL

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

Colin raised himself on his elbow. "What if those bombers take off tonight?"

"They'll hit some pretty heavy going. There's a patrol of pursuit planes strung across Canada—every last plane fit to fly is in the air. Meantime, Winnipeg, Ottawa, and Toronto are blacked out—we're calling it a practice maneuver."

Few slept that night. Long before daylight the gunners began putting the last loving touches to their weapons.

Dawn crept over the world as a red sun touched the southern ice to fire and, with that first beam, Dowling and his men followed Colin out over the frozen snowfield.

Less than two hours brought them to their goal. Well hidden in a sheltered elbow of the bay, the German air base looked quietly innocent beneath the morning sun. Two low, squat buildings, covered with ice to camouflage them from the air, and three huge white canvas hangars, staked down against the wind.

But no sign of life; no human activity. Scanning the terrain with a practiced eye, Col. Dowling called his lieutenants to him.

"Establish your machine guns where we agreed," he gave his crisp orders. "At the first sign of resistance we'll rake them with three fires. You have exactly thirty minutes to make ready."

Separating into groups, the gunners moved closer, keeping well back behind the shoreline, while Colin led Dowling and a squad of men to the shelter of a hummock. There they halted, and Colin heard the metallic click of machine guns loading; then Dowling whispered, "We can blow the very Hitler out of Fritz from here!" Watch in hand, Dowling waited. In thirty minutes, precisely to the second, Dowling turned to his nearest gunner.

"Fire a burst just this side of the building," he commanded.

Shots rattled, and puffs of shattered ice sprang up before the Germans' hut. It was like stamping on an anthill as a score of men in white parkas came piling out, some with rifles, but at sight of that waiting circle of men and guns, they drew quickly back and began huddling around a tall officer standing in the doorway.

The officer barked an order, and a German soldier bolted for the nearest hangar.

"He's going to blow up the bombers!" Colin shouted, but Dowling already had nodded to his gunner. A burst of shot, and the running Nazi sprawled on the ice just as the Canadian fighter planes came screaming in, barely clearing the hummocks, circling over the air base so low that the barrels of their machine guns glinted in the early light.

The Nazis gave up all show of resistance. Throwing down their guns, they crowded back toward the cabin, while their officer worked forward with raised hands. "Nicht mehr!" he called.

Leaving a strong guard over prisoners and planes, Colonel Dowling and Colin Rae were on their way back to Learmonth. "No one," the former grumbled, "who holds down my job should be surprised at anything. But this plot came so near succeeding I get a cold chill. They had bombs and drums of gas enough for twenty trips. They had flight maps for every airplane-producing center in the United States, and detailed routes to Detroit and New York. It could have been a major catastrophe of the war."

"How did they get those planes here?"

"They might have come in on submarines, but I doubt it. They could have flown them in without the least difficulty. Why, ten years ago, Germany made a test flight from Iceland to Chicago and Detroit in an old crate of a flying boat. Made it nonstop. Think how simple it would be now. It was partly because of that danger the United States landed troops in Iceland. Those bombers may have come from Norway, via Greenland perhaps."

Colin had been looking out the window. Suddenly, he asked, "Do you need me after we get to Learmonth?"

"Why?"

"Because I'm starting out after Jonathan Dove."

The Colonel frowned. "Be sensible, Rae. Men are on the watch for him now throughout Canada. Dove can't stick his nose out this country."

"Yes he can."

"How?"

"By meeting that plane he used for the photographic work. He can hide out until it's due, and then get away."

"Where will he meet it?"

"I know where," Colin answered shortly, "and I'm the only one that's going to know."

"All right." Dowling's shoulders rose in reluctant consent. "Have it your own way." He looked into Colin's eyes. "But when you get back, I've got a job for you."

"What kind of job?"

Dowling pointed toward the north. "How do we know the danger's over up there? Somewhere on the bay there may be other Nazi bomber nests. This thing today has taught me the need of a ground patrol, winter and summer, until the war's won. Air patrol alone isn't enough—they can camouflage their bases too well.

"I want you to organize a ground patrol for the country around the bay. Already Japan and Germany are building planes that can reach here if they find some safe place to base. You've got to see that they can't. You know this country, Rae; you know the people—Crees, Eskimos, and whites. You can build up your own organization and choose your own men." Dowling leaned forward, then very earnestly he said, "Let me count on you, Rae."

"When I come back," Colin answered, "you can count on me."

An hour later they landed. Leaving Dowling to radio Winnipeg, Colin hurried directly to Dove's school.

Tennant's wolf team lay in the trail outside Benedict's cabin, and it was Nate who opened the door at Colin's knock. Across the room Blair was standing, and she ran toward him, clasping his arm in both hands, as if to make certain he had come back to her. Nate asked, "What happened up above?"

Quickly Colin told them of the Nazi air base episode, then he asked the question that Blair dreaded. "Where is Dove?"

"All we know is this," Tennant answered. "Yesterday he came back to the school and left with his dog team over the Moose Lake trail. He took bedding and grub, two high-powered rifles and all the photo prints in that room. They've had planes up from Winnipeg scouring the country, but no word yet. Selkirk and the mounties started out this morning to spread the word to trappers and Indian villages."

Nate stopped, then casually he added, "I suppose you'll be going after him."

"Just as soon as I can pick up a dog team."

"I knew you'd say that. In fact"—Nate looked self-consciously toward Miss Benedict—"I promised Blair I'd go with you."

Colin shook his head. "This is a one-man job."

"No, it isn't." Nate's eyes were serious. "It's bad business following a man like Dove, and you know it. Let me come, Colin. We'll use my team. It's the fastest in the country. I've got food and eiderdowns packed for both—I've even got your favorite rifle, the 25 high-power. Let me come."

Colin's eyes rose to the big trapper's bandaged head. "I'm going a long way, Nate, and I'm going fast. You need rest."

Tennant's dark face hardened. "Dr. Benedict told me some things about Dove last night—the way he had Olsen plant snare wire and poisoned bait along my trap lines to set the Crees against me. I've got my own account to settle with Dove, so I'm coming along."

Without waiting for Colin's decision, Nate walked out to the wolf team.

Alone with Blair, Colin took her in his arms. "I've got to go, dear. You know that, don't you?"

"I know," she whispered. "All last night I knew it must be so. But just—just come back to me, that's all." They kissed.

Outside the cabin, Colin nodded to Tennant. The man hunt was on.

Raising the lead line of his toboggan, Nate shouted to the team. Crouching low in the snow, his wolves threw their great weight against the breastbands and, digging in their claws, they were off over the rough snow trail.

Science Discussed At Child Club Meeting

Group Donates To Fund for Air Base

The Child Study club held its meeting at the home of Mrs. Clarence Clark, Deercreek township Monday night with Mrs. Charles Walters co-hostess. Mrs. Carroll Morgan, club president, opened the business session with a poem, "Mothering Babies."

A ways and means committee was appointed with Mrs. Fritz Sieverts chairman, Mrs. Dan McClain, and Mrs. C. Ray Barnhart, assistants.

The club voted to donate $5 for magazine subscriptions for the boys at the Lockbourne Air Base.

It was announced that a picnic for the children of club members will be held at Logan Elm the last Wednesday in June. No regular meetings will be held in June, July and August.

Mrs. G. E. Carpenter, sister of Mrs. Leonard Snodgrass, was a visitor.

Excellent reports were given by those who attended the Eastern-Southern district convention of the Ohio Child Conservation League, May 10 at Zanesville.

Mrs. Richard Robinson presented an interesting paper on "First Lessons in Science." In part she said:

"Science for the child has been rather generally taken to be synonymous with "nature study." This study should include physical science and health education as well as simple lessons in the biology of plants and animals. Special emphasis is being placed now upon the possibility of teaching children the facts of mating, procreation, gestation and birth through the observation of animal life.

"Are children interested in the world of science in which they are living? Any parent who has tried to answer the thousand and one questions fired at them by the pre-school child knows that children are curious about everything around them. We mothers can be a great help to our youngsters in their early inquisitiveness. Encourage them to experiment with things and prove for themselves minor problems. It is not difficult to suggest materials, for children turn almost any materials to their purposes."

A fine dessert course was served during the social hour by the hostesses.

Setting Raspberry Plants in Victory Garden

By DEAN HALLIDAY

THERE ARE TWO general systems of planting and training raspberries with which the Victory gardener should be familiar. One is the hedge-row system and the other one is known as the hill system.

In the hedge-row system, illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, the plants are set in rows which are laid out about seven feet apart. The plants are set two and one-half to three feet apart in the row. This system has the advantage of providing the maximum number of canes for a given area of ground.

Many sucker plants are sent up in the hedge-row system and unless these are thoroughly eliminated the planting will soon become a thicket and get out of hand. The width of the row, therefore, should be maintained at not more than one foot, with three or four canes allowed to remain per running foot.

In the hill system, also illustrated, the plants are usually set five by five feet apart each way, with a stake firmly set in the middle of each hill. Later, as sucker plants are sent up, the individual hills are best confined to a space about 15 inches wide, with five to eight of the strongest canes remaining. The other plants must be cut out to keep the hills within bounds, or else the planting will become a hopeless thicket yielding only small and inferior berries.

Science Discussed At Child Club Meeting

Group Donates To Fund for Air Base

The Child Study club held its meeting at the home of Mrs. Clarence Clark, Deercreek township Monday night with Mrs. Charles Walters co-hostess. Mrs. Carroll Morgan, club president, opened the business session with a poem, "Mothering Babies."

A ways and means committee was appointed with Mrs. Fritz Sieverts chairman, Mrs. Dan McClain and Mrs. C. Ray Barnhart, assistants.

The club voted to donate $5 for magazine subscriptions for the boys at the Lockbourne Air Base.

It was announced that a picnic for the children of club members will be held at Logan Elm the last Wednesday in June. No regular meetings will be held in June, July and August.

Mrs. G. E. Carpenter, sister of Mrs. Leonard Snodgrass, was a visitor.

Excellent reports were given by those who attended the Eastern-Southern district convention of the Ohio Child Conservation League, May 10 at Zanesville.

Mrs. Richard Robinson presented an interesting paper on "First Lessons in Science." In part she said:

"Science for the child has been rather generally taken to be synonymous with "nature study." This study should include physical science and health education as well as simple lessons in the biology of plants and animals. Special emphasis is being placed now upon the possibility of teaching children the facts of mating, procreation, gestation and birth through the observation of animal life.

"Are children interested in the world of science in which they are living? Any parent who has tried to answer the thousand and one questions fired at them by the pre-school child knows that children are curious about everything around them. We mothers can be a great help to our youngsters in their early inquisitiveness. Encourage them to experiment with things and prove for themselves minor problems. It is not difficult to suggest materials, for children turn almost any materials to their purposes."

A fine dessert course was served during the social hour by the hostesses.

CLYDE SHOUN PITCHES INTO HALL OF FAME

CINCINNATI, May 16—Clyde M. Shoun, due to report for service with the Navy shortly, achieved baseball immortality today when he hurled the 1944 season's second no-hit game for the Cincinnati Reds against the Boston Braves, beating them 1 to 0.

Charley Aleno scored the lone run in yesterday's contest, a home run in the fifth inning off Jim Tobin who pitched a no-hitter himself a few days ago.

Tobin, who allowed the Reds a scant five hits, spoiled Shoun's perfect game when he drew a base on balls in the third inning. However, the inning ended with Tobin still on first.

The lanky 29-year-old Tennessean Southpaw last year won 14 games for the Reds and was charged with five defeats. He was the first Red to hurl a no-hit contest since Johnny Vander Meer had a pair of them on June 11 and 15, 1938, against Boston and Brooklyn.

PURINAS DOWN JAYCEES 13-12 IN HARD BATTLE

Ralston-Purina softball team defeated the Jaycee team in a City League game on the Ted Lewis Recreation ball diamond, Monday evening by a score of 13 to 12. The lead changed hands several times during the game.

Play of both teams was ragged, and opposing pitchers were hit consistently. Several long drives were registered by members of both teams.

City League games for the rest of the week will find the Blue Ribbon team pitted against Circle City on Wednesday evening and Ralston-Purina playing against Blue Ribbon on Friday night.

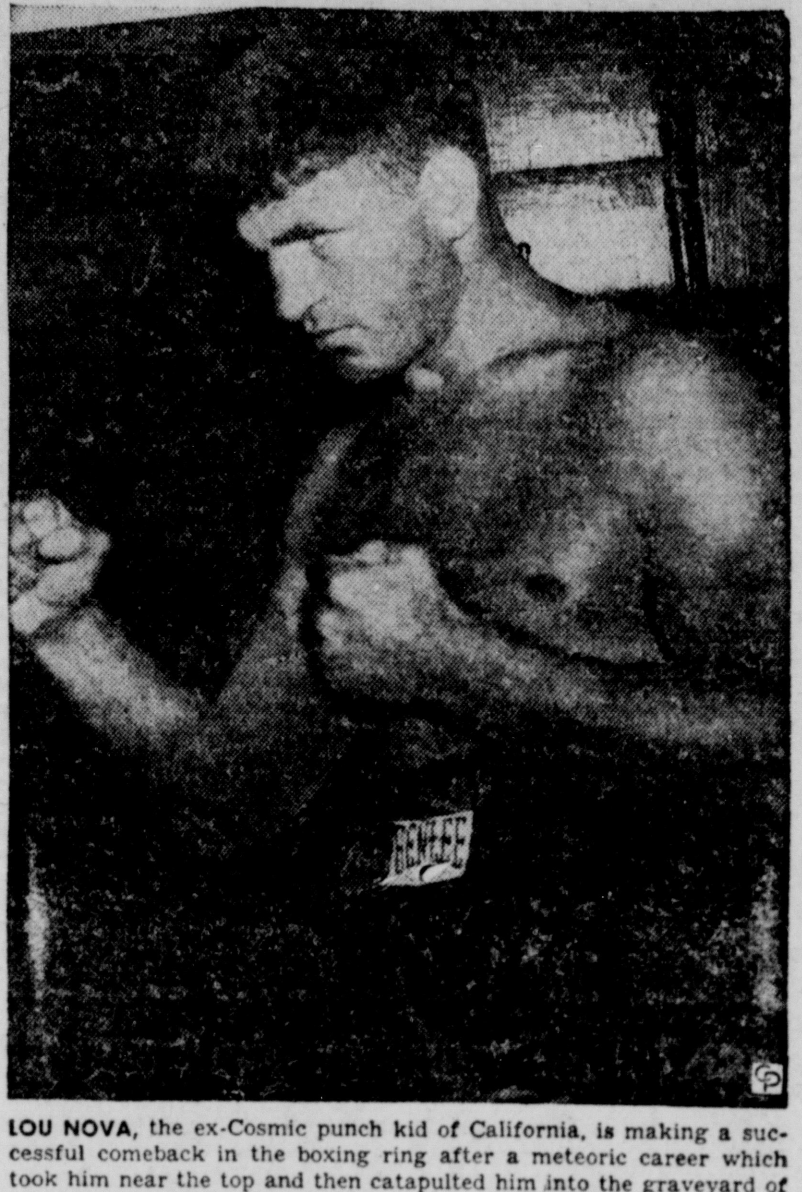
LOU'S COMING BACK--AND GOOD



LOU NOVA, the ex-Cosmic punch kid of California, is making a successful comeback in the boxing ring after a meteoric career which took him near the top and then catapulted him into the graveyard of fighters. Lou, now weighing 208 pounds, has won eight straight fights, all by knockouts, in his comeback campaign. (International)

Next To Pensive, Devil Diver Holds Interest; Favorite of Arcaro

NEW YORK, May 16—Next to Pensive, the most talked about horse at the moment is Devil Diver, which is making a bid for horse-of-the-year honors and a place among the all-time best in the handicap division. Eddie Arcaro has a few words to say about Devil Diver (just as he did about Pensive in this space yesterday), for the current Greentree sensation holds number one spot in the little jockey's affections.

"Of all the horses I've ever ridden, and that goes for Whirlaway and the rest, I'd rather be on Devil Diver," Arcaro said musing over the five-year-olds performance at Belmont last Saturday while Arcaro was trying unsuccessfully to hustle Stir Up to victory in the Preakness.

"Devil Diver is a jockey's horse," Arcaro explained, "He can carry almost as much weight as you can pile on him; he has speed; he is dead game; he knows how to get into position and, on top of it all, he has two or three runs, unlike Whirlaway, for instance, which had that one run through the stretch."

Arcaro speaks of the horse almost with reverence; not like a jockey talking of a mount who can get out there and win money, but rather like a kid telling you about his pony, and he seems to be a little happy to know that his judgment has been vindicated after all this time.

When Devil Diver was three and in the Kentucky Derby of 1942, running as the Greentree entry with Shut Out, Arcaro had his choice of mounts between the two.

He picked Devil Diver and finished sixth. Wayne Wright was put aboard Shut Out and won the Derby.

Arcaro probably has felt a little twinge over that mistake in judgment of the moment, but saw something in the horse then which has been brought out only in his later races.

His performances of this year would be regarded as courageous and stout-hearted to the point of gallantry in a human. He has won the Toboggan and Metropolitan handicaps for the second year in a row, to become the first ever to score this "double-double," and in taking the Metropolitan last Saturday successfully lugged more weight than any other winner since the stakes was started in 1891.

Despite that terrific impost he won the mile race in 1:35-4-5, after the three quarters had been travelled in an exceptionally speedy 1:10-2-5. Against his 134 pounds, Slide Rule carried 126, Wait A Bit, 118; Four Freedoms, 115; Pops Pick, 110; Alquest, 109; Boysy and Brownie, 108; and Porter's Cap, 102.

He will go in the Suburban and several other events, posing a problem for the handicapper. In theory, the weight-assignments should make all horses even—result in a dead heat for the entire field—but there is a limit to what even a Devil Diver can lug, and they won't pile on any more. Result: He should win them all.

In the Suburban, to be run Labor Day, he will be shooting for one of the year's richest purses, a cool $50,000, and if man or beast ever had $50,000 safely tucked away, Devil Diver answers the description.

Nothing short of a lasso seems likely to stop his stampede through the ranks of the handicap runners.

The big race actually is between him and Pensive for horse-of-the-year honors. They are making it close.

COLONELS SNAP BREWERS' LONG WINNING STREAK

By International News Service

The Milwaukee Brewer's twelve game winning streak was just another page in the record book today as the Louisville Colonels pushed across three runs in the tenth inning to defeat the league-leading Brewers, 4 to 1.

Their first defeat in 15 contests, the Brewers were held to eight hits by winning pitcher Stan Partenheimer. Dick Hearn was batted out of the box in the tenth and was tabbed with the defeat.

The Columbus Red Birds cut the Brewers lead to six games by virtue of a decisive 11 to 4 triumph over the Minneapolis Millers.

Behind the pitching of Johnny Herr and powerful hitting by Joe Mack, the Red Birds made the game a run away in the fourth and fifth frames by scoring three and five runs respectively. Mack connected with a round tripper in the fourth.

The Red Birds collected a total of eight hits off losing pitcher Loren Bain, and relief hurlers Ray Mosley and Harold Johnson.

St. Paul nosed out Toledo in an eleven inning game, 5 to 4 and Indianapolis ran rough shod over Kansas City, collecting 16 hits and scoring a 10 to 4 triumph.

PERFECT GAME BARELY MISSED BY CLYDE SHOUN

Phils Hastened Out Of Second Spot By Cards—Giants Start Climb

NEW YORK, May 16—Clyde Shoun stands today as the major leagues' foremost example of what absence from wartime northern Spring training will do for a man. The Cincinnati Reds left-hander from Mountain City, Tenn., who went into the 1944 campaign without a single wisp of training under his belt, pitched a no-hitter against the Boston Braves yesterday and missed a perfect game only by the whisker's breadth of one walk.

This was the second straight day in which a Reds pitcher barely missed baseball immortality. Bucky Walters saw a no-hit game flutter from his fingers Sunday when Connie Ryan reached him for a broken-bat single in the eighth, and yesterday Shoun separated himself from the first perfect game seen in 22 years by issuing a pass to opposing pitcher Jim Tobin in the third.

Shoun was not supported by much in the hitting department, Chuck Aleno's fifth-inning homer providing the 1 to 0 victory, but the southpaw was materially aided by great fielding by Gee Walker and Eddie Miller. The big southpaw had to be better than average in getting past Tobin, who himself yielded only five hits. The Reds triumph put them in second place.

The former occupants of second place in the National league, the Philadelphia Phillies, were hastened out of that favored niche by the St. Louis Cardinals, 11 to 6. Dick Barrett was hammered for six straight hits, and although Chet Covington eventually retired the side, the Cards scored nine runs in the first frame. Harry Gumbert was credited with the victory, although driven from the mound in the eighth under a four-run rally.

The New York Giants, once the leaders of the league, began the long march upward from seventh place by nosing out the Pittsburgh Pirates, 8 to 7.

It was a free-hitting brawl. The Pirates scored five runs in the second inning and two more in the eighth, but the Giants spread their batting attack, scoring one run each of the first three frames and four in the sixth. Phil Weintraub headed the Giant batting attack which gave Ace Adams a relief triumph, collecting a single, two doubles and a triple.

The Chicago Cubs continued to fatten up the averages of the opposition with a 14 to 3 loss to the Brooklyn Dodgers. The Cubs now have won three contests and lost 17. Hal Gregg held them to only five hits as a parade of four Chicago pitchers were hit for 17 safeties, including Luis Olmo's homer in the eighth.

In the American league, the Philadelphia Athletics asserted a hitherto unsuspected power by lashing the Detroit Tigers, 6 to 2, on a dramatic last-minute homer by Frankie Hayes.

Hayes hit his second game-winning homer in two days in the last half of the ninth with the bases filled and two out, to break a 2-2 tie and give Russ Christopher a nine-hit pitching victory.

The New York Yankees continued their winning streak, taking their eleventh victory in 13 games, against the Chicago White Sox, 10 to 2. The world champions climaxed their eight-hit batting attack with a five-run rally in the seventh inning. Walter Dubiel yielded only five hits over the full route and was aided by three Chicago errors.

Cleveland lost, 4 to 3, in an 11-inning night game in Washington. Hillis Layne singled to left field in the final chukker, driving home Mickey Guerra. In the ninth inning, with the Indians ahead, 3 to 1, Guerra's home run wth Torres on first base tied the score at 3-3. The victory gave Washington its 10th win in 14 games.

SHANS EASY WINNER

NEW YORK, May 16—Cleo Shans, 135-pounder of Los Angeles, had an easy victory to his credit today over Al Guido of New York after their 10-round feature bout at St. Nicholas arena. Guido weighed 134½.

CLYDE SHOUN PITCHES INTO HALL OF FAME

CINCINNATI, May 16—Clyde M. Shoun, due to report for service with the Navy shortly, achieved baseball immortality today when he hurled the 1944 season's second no-hit game for the Cincinnati Reds against the Boston Braves, beating them 1 to 0.

Charley Aleno scored the lone run in yesterday's contest, a home run in the fifth inning off Jim Tobin who pitched a no-hitter himself a few days ago.

Tobin, who allowed the Reds a scant five hits, spoiled Shoun's perfect game when he drew a base on balls in the third inning. However, the inning ended with Tobin still on first.

The lanky 29-year-old Tennessean Southpaw last year won 14 games for the Reds and was charged with five defeats. He was the first Red to hurl a no-hit contest since Johnny Vander Meer had a pair of them on June 11 and 15, 1938, against Boston and Brooklyn.

PURINAS DOWN JAYCEES 13-12 IN HARD BATTLE

Ralston-Purina softball team defeated the Jaycee team in a City League game on the Ted Lewis Recreation ball diamond, Monday evening by a score of 13 to 12. The lead changed hands several times during the game.

Play of both teams was ragged, and opposing pitchers were hit consistently. Several long drives were registered by members of both teams.

City League games for the rest of the week will find the Blue Ribbon team pitted against Circle City on Wednesday evening and Ralston-Purina playing against Blue Ribbon on Friday night.

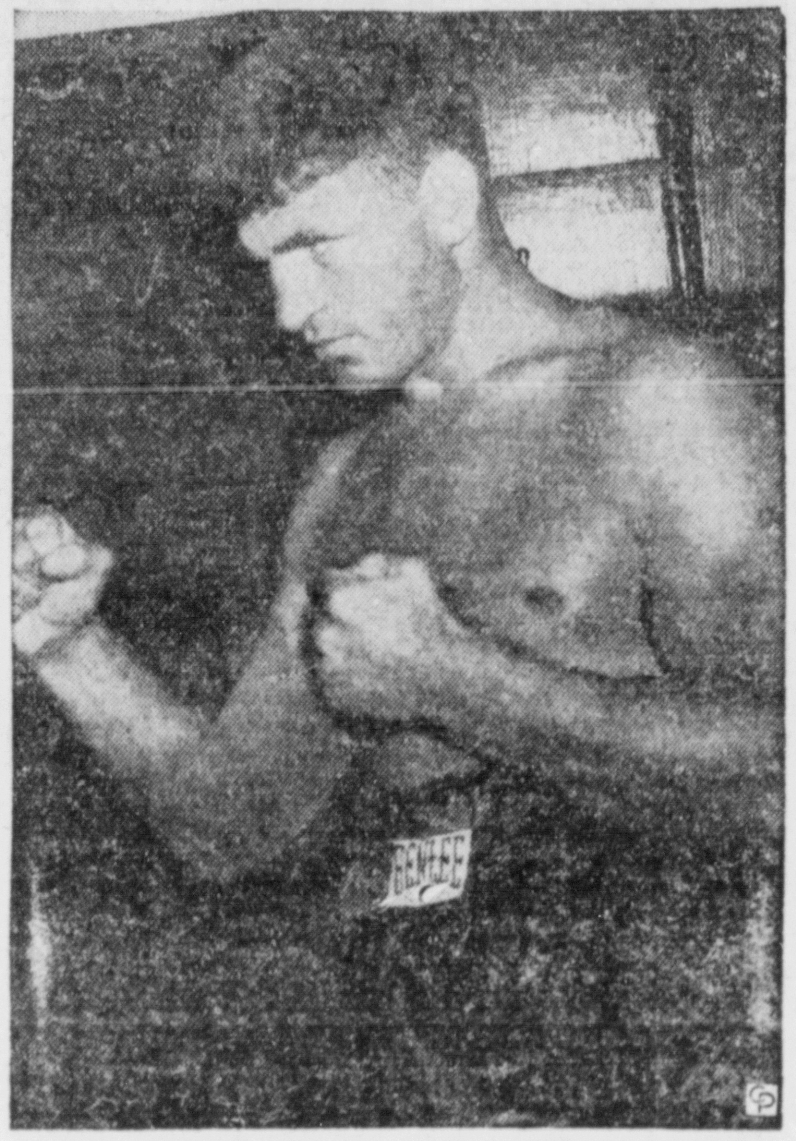
LOU'S COMING BACK--AND GOOD



LOU NOVA, the ex-Cosmic punch kid of California, is making a successful comeback in the boxing ring after a meteoric career which took him near the top and then catapulted him into the graveyard of fighters. Lou, now weighing 208 pounds, has won eight straight fights, all by knockouts, in his comeback campaign. (International)

Next To Pensive, Devil Diver Holds Interest; Favorite of Arcaro

NEW YORK, May 16—Next to Pensive, the most talked about horse at the moment is Devil Diver, which is making a bid for horse-of-the-year honors and a place among the all-time best in the handicap division. Eddie Arcaro has a few words to say about Devil Diver (just as he did about Pensive in this space yesterday), for the current Greentree sensation holds number one spot in the little jockey's affections.

"Of all the horses I've ever ridden, and that goes for Whirlaway and the rest, I'd rather be on Devil Diver," Arcaro said musing over the five-year-olds performance at Belmont last Saturday while Arcaro was trying unsuccessfully to hustle Stir Up to victory in the Preakness.

"Devil Diver is a jockey's horse," Arcaro explained, "He can carry almost as much weight as you can pile on him; he has speed; he is dead game; he knows how to get into position and, on top of it all, he has two or three runs, unlike Whirlaway, for instance, which had that one run through the stretch."

Arcaro speaks of the horse almost with reverence; not like a jockey talking of a mount who can get out there and win money, but rather like a kid telling you about his pony, and he seems to be a little happy to know that his judgment has been vindicated after all this time.

When Devil Diver was three and in the Kentucky Derby of 1942, running as the Greentree entry with Shut Out, Arcaro had his choice of mounts between the two.

He picked Devil Diver and finished sixth. Wayne Wright was put aboard Shut Out and won the Derby.

Arcaro probably has felt a little twinge over that mistake in judgment of the moment, but saw something in the horse then which has been brought out only in his later races.

His performances of this year would be regarded as courageous and stout-hearted to the point of gallantry in a human. He has won the Toboggan and Metropolitan handicaps for the second year in a row, to become the first ever to score this "double-double," and in taking the Metropolitan last Saturday successfully lugged more weight than any other winner since the stakes was started in 1891.

Despite that terrific impost he won the mile race in 1:35-4-5, after the three quarters had been travelled in an exceptionally speedy 1:10-2-5. Against his 134 pounds, Slide Rule carried 126, Wait A Bit, 118; Four Freedoms, 115; Pops Pick, 110; Alquest, 109; Boysy and Brownie, 108; and Porter's Cap, 102.

He will go in the Suburban and several other events, posing a problem for the handicapper. In theory, the weight-assignments should make all horses even—result in a dead heat for the entire field—but there is a limit to what even a Devil Diver can lug, and they won't pile on any more. Result: He should win them all.

In the Suburban, to be run Labor Day, he will be shooting for one of the year's richest purses, a cool $50,000, and if man or beast ever had $50,000 safely tucked away, Devil Diver answers the description.

Nothing short of a lasso seems likely to stop his stampede through the ranks of the handicap runners.

The big race actually is between him and Pensive for horse-of-the-year honors. They are making it close.

COLONELS SNAP BREWERS' LONG WINNING STREAK

By International News Service

The Milwaukee Brewer's twelve game winning streak was just another page in the record book today as the Louisville Colonels pushed across three runs in the tenth inning to defeat the league-leading Brewers, 4 to 1.

Their first defeat in 15 contests, the Brewers were held to eight hits by winning pitcher Stan Partenheimer. Dick Hearn was batted out of the box in the tenth and was tabbed with the defeat.

The Columbus Red Birds cut the Brewers lead to six games by virtue of a decisive 11 to 4 triumph over the Minneapolis Millers.

Behind the pitching of Johnny Herr and powerful hitting by Joe Mack, the Red Birds made the game a run away in the fourth and fifth frames by scoring three and five runs respectively. Mack connected with a round tripper in the fourth.

The Red Birds collected a total of eight hits off losing pitcher Loren Bain, and relief hurlers Ray Mosley and Harold Johnson.

St. Paul nosed out Toledo in an eleven inning game, 5 to 4 and Indianapolis ran rough shod over Kansas City, collecting 16 hits and scoring a 10 to 4 triumph.

PERFECT GAME BARELY MISSED BY CLYDE SHOUN

Phils Hastened Out Of Second Spot By Cards—Giants Start Climb

NEW YORK, May 16—Clyde Shoun stands today as the major leagues' foremost example of what absence from wartime northern Spring training will do for a man. The Cincinnati Reds left-hander from Mountain City, Tenn., who went into the 1944 campaign without a single wisp of training under his belt, pitched a no-hitter against the Boston Braves yesterday and missed a perfect game only by the whisker's breadth of one walk.

This was the second straight day in which a Reds pitcher barely missed baseball immortality. Bucky Walters saw a no-hit game flutter from his fingers Sunday when Connie Ryan reached him for a broken-bat single in the eighth, and yesterday Shoun separated himself from the first perfect game seen in 22 years by issuing a pass to opposing pitcher Jim Tobin in the third.

Shoun was not supported by much in the hitting department, Chuck Aleno's fifth-inning homer providing the 1 to 0 victory, but the southpaw was materially aided by great fielding by Gee Walker and Eddie Miller. The big southpaw had to be better than average in getting past Tobin, who himself yielded only five hits. The Reds triumph put them in second place.

The former occupants of second place in the National league, the Philadelphia Phillies, were hastened out of that favored niche by the St. Louis Cardinals, 11 to 6. Dick Barrett was hammered for six straight hits, and although Chet Covington eventually retired the side, the Cards scored nine runs in the first frame. Harry Gumbert was credited with the victory, although driven from the mound in the eighth under a four-run rally.

The New York Giants, once the leaders of the league, began the long march upward from seventh place by nosing out the Pittsburgh Pirates, 8 to 7.

It was a free-hitting brawl. The Pirates scored five runs in the second inning and two more in the eighth, but the Giants spread their batting attack, scoring one run each of the first three frames and four in the sixth. Phil Weintraub headed the Giant batting attack which gave Ace Adams a relief triumph, collecting a single, two doubles and a triple.

The Chicago Cubs continued to fatten up the averages of the opposition with a 14 to 3 loss to the Brooklyn Dodgers. The Cubs now have won three contests and lost 17. Hal Gregg held them to only five hits as a parade of four Chicago pitchers were hit for 17 safeties, including Luis Olmo's homer in the eighth.

In the American league, the Philadelphia Athletics asserted a hitherto unsuspected power by lashing the Detroit Tigers, 6 to 2, on a dramatic last-minute homer by Frankie Hayes.

Hayes hit his second game-winning homer in two days in the last half of the ninth with the bases filled and two out, to break a 2-2 tie and give Russ Christopher a nine-hit pitching victory.

The New York Yankees continued their winning streak, taking their eleventh victory in 13 games, against the Chicago White Sox, 10 to 2. The world champions climaxed their eight-hit batting attack with a five-run rally in the seventh inning. Walter Dubiel yielded only five hits over the full route and was aided by three Chicago errors.

Cleveland lost, 4 to 3, in an 11-inning night game in Washington. Hillis Layne singled to left field in the final chukker, driving home Mickey Guerra. In the ninth inning, with the Indians ahead, 3 to 1, Guerra's home run wth Torres on first base tied the score at 3-3. The victory gave Washington its 10th win in 14 games.

SHANS EASY WINNER

NEW YORK, May 16—Cleo Shans, 135-pounder of Los Angeles, had an easy victory to his credit today over Al Guido of New York after their 10-round feature bout at St. Nicholas arena. Guido weighed 134½.

CASS DALEY AGAIN

Cass Daley, the film and radio comedienne who has been setting a record for guest appearances, makes her fifth and sixth consecutive visits to the Bob Burns "Arkansas Traveler" program, on successive Thursdays, May 18 and 25.

DAGWOOD JEALOUS

Realizing the importance of letters to soldiers, "Blondie" goes to the USO for the name of a soldier with few or no relatives, and draws one Aloysius Piggledinker, as a pen pal. Dagwood and Alexander find a few letters and become jealous, but their jealousy really becomes super-sized, when "Blondie Meets a Soldier," next Monday. Aloysius Piggledinker turns out to be a more romantic character than the name would seem to indicate.

SALUTES ETHEL BARRYMORE

Julia Sanderson cites an intimate friend, Ethel Barrymore as an outstanding example of sincerity, when she discusses that charm asset on her "Let's Be Charming" program Thursday. Her fashion hint indicates a new use for bicycle clips: To make a cool, attractive Summer hat! To dye or not to dye is the beauty story, with Miss Sanderson answering the many letters from women who want to know if they should dye their hair. The musical portion of the program includes "I'm in Love With Someone," by Miss Sanderson; "Open Up That Door," featuring the Serenaders; "Carioca," played by the piano-organ team, Jack Shilkret and Johnny Gart; "It Had to Be You," sung by Miss Sanderson; a modernized, Serenaders version of "Roamin' in the Gloamin'," and "Too Much in Love," the finale.

RADIO NEWS NOTES

Due to other commitments, Pat O'Brien will not be able to visit Dinah Shore on her program Thursday. However, she will have an able substitute in suave Herbert Marshall.

Kate Smith shares billing with J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the FBI, on "We, the People" next Sunday, when the program offers a salute to "I Am An American Day."

Dr. Frank Black pays tribute to another maestro, Morton Gould, conductor of the "Carnival" series, when he batons the Symphony in a special version of Gould's brief work, "American Salute," next Sunday.

Future headliners scheduled to guest star in "Silver Theatre" drama presentations, Sundays, include Ingrid Bergman, Herbert Marshall and Nigel Bruce, May 21; George Raft and Ruth Hussey, May 28, and Joan Bennett, June 4.

Imagine Frank Sinatra, the delight of the dames, singing one of his romantic ballads accompanied by a bazooka. It could be. Bob Burns, who has bazooked his way to fame, takes time off from his own "Arkansas Traveler" programs to visit with Sinatra Wednesday. The bobby sock brigade will really have something to swoon about.

With Kay Kyser's new Columbia flicker, "Battleship Blues," already half completed, plans are now in the making for the "Ole Professor's" next camera stint. Production will not get under way until Fall, however, when Kyser returns from his planned Summer entertainment tour of the overseas war fronts.

Here's a casting twist for you! Ed Jerome, who played a leading role (George Washington) in the recent Broadway success, "The Patriots," is usually Jerry Devine's first choice, when his "Mr. District Attorney" scripts call for a middle-aged non-patriot, such as a black marketer, ration stamp counterfeiter, or saboteur!

Waletr Vaughn is at last immortal! And about time, too—he has died often enough. He has been electrocuted 112 times, hanged 173 times, plain murdered three or four times a week, sentenced to more than eight thousand years in prison as a result of his "illegal" activities on "Mr. District Attorney," "Gang Busters" and Ellery Queen. Now Vaughn is immortalized in "Land of the Lost" as King Findall, in Isabel Manning Hewson's fantasy series whose locale is a marvelous kingdom at the bottom of the sea where all lost things go.

BOOK OF POEMS PUBLISHED BY MRS. ROBINSON

Mrs. Ward Robinson, of Circleville, has written a book of poems being published by F. J. Heer, Columbus, under the title "Rounded Hours."

The Rev. Leavitt C. Sherburne, local Episcopalian rector has written the following appreciation of the publication:

"A first book of poems, "Rounded Hours", by Gertrude W. Robinson, has just come from the press. The friends of Mrs. Robinson will welcome this book, and wish it a wide circulation.

"There are two classes of verse writers:—to one belong the mere rhymesters,—and they are legion; to the other, the real poets,—they are not so many. Mrs. Robinson comes easily under the second classification. A poet of rare gifts, she is both an interpreter and a creator of Spiritual values in poetry. Her verse is marked by dignity of thought and of expression, never descending to the trivial. One thing that stamps her verse as genuinely poetical, is the fact that the form is made subservient to the thought, never the thought, to the form.

"It is difficult to select, from a collection of poems, certain ones, and call these the best. The reader's own taste almost always is a determining factor. But certain poems in Rounded Hours seem to have a special appeal, and to be worthy of particular mention. For example, the following poems:

"Far Vision, Ringgold Hill, Fragraments, This Land of Ours, My Son, Logan Elm, Expectancy, Unity, The Presence."

ances given to the West Virginia senator, has now won out.

NOTE—General "Hap" Arnold, head of the Air Forces, always favored self-sealing tanks and other protection for paratroop transports, but his decision was sidetracked. Arnold also is pushing Army purchases of the quick-release type of parachute harness, the Army having now ordered more than 200,000. STATE DEPARTMENT HARANGUE

Dignified, delightful British Ambassador Lord Halifax called on Undersecretary of State Stettinius some time ago on a secret matter. While they were closeted together, Asssitant Secretary of State Adolf Berle, diminutive and precocious, joined them.

Soon, high-pitched scolding voices came from Stettinius' office. Callers in his anteroom could not help ovrhearing the harangue as it reverberated even through the heavy mahogany doors of the State Department.

Finally, Lord Halifax was ushered out. Later, Stettinius came out, followed by Berle, who looked a bit agitated.

"Was I too tough with him?" asked Berle.

"No," said Stettinius, "you were just right."

"I felt," said Berle, with the air of a parent who has just delivered a good spanking, "that it simply had to be done."

What it was all about was not divulged, but Berle has been carrying on long discussions and arguments with the British regarding the future air routes of the world.

PENSIONING JOHN O'CONNOR

There is a good reason why Roosevelt's old enemy, ex-Congressman John J. O'Connor, is on the Federal payroll as the legal adviser to Tammany Congressman Martin Kennedy. If he serves long enough, he can get a New York State pension.

New York law provides that, when a public official has served twenty years for the State or Federal Government or both, he is then entitled to a pension, provided he is 55 years old. O'Connor, who is 58, entered the New York Assembly in 1921, went from there to the U. S. House of Representatives in 1923, and got in eighteen years' service for both New York and Congress before Roosevelt purged him in 1938.

Today, although practicing law in Washington, O'Connor has turned up on the payroll of Congressman Kennedy as his legal adviser. Kenedy is mysterious as to what O'Connor does, but whatever it is, he draws $2,600 for doing it. And in due time he should qualify for a New York pension.
